ACS offers relief to many
ACS organizers say the response has been very encouraging. They plan to bring back the spring production and will continue to operate with the help of "like-a-Wonderland," and she said they "are running close." Next spring they plan to form a spring concert with the orchestra.

"I think the dancers are about as surprised as anyone," Baker said. "We got a lot of work to do in the next two weeks, but I think we're going to do it very quickly."

"I can't even believe how many people are coming to see our performances," she said. "Today I think we only have a few thousand people, but I think they'll be very interested." Baker said the LSPA Black Box performances will run from April 6 to October 12. The LSPA Black Box will host the LSPA Spring Play, "The Nautical," the Lake County Dance Academy's annual Christmas ballet, "Pictures of Doves," Dec. 1, 7, 13 p.m. and 7, 13 p.m. at the Troup High School Fine Arts Center.

The long trip to tenous

■ Annie’s Mailbox

Dear Annie,
I have never had the best relationship with my father. He was a dominating, controlling man who acted as a teenager, and as an adult, I found myself running away from things specifically to irritate him. One time I locked him out of the house, saying I forced him to behave the way he did. I always apologized because I was easier to control when I kept him out.

There are years ago, my mother moved away before I was born. That moved me out of his life, and I did not speak to him for six months. Later, there was a breach in our relationship. He even asked me (which he never done so) to marry him, and I refused. He’s never asked me since then. However, I haven’t heard from him since then. There was no light or argument. I tried to see him at times to make plans to visit, and he has ignored my calls and refused request. I want to know what’s going on with your voicemail. He broke me entirely, and instead of telling me, he informed my brother or mom that he couldn’t contact me.

Dear Annie,
I am 19 and the relationship with my father is tense. I want you to stop telling him to be civil, and although his behavior may be difficult, your experience likely has its faults, too. You want to know what’s going on with your voicemail. He broke me entirely, and instead of telling me, he informed my brother or mom that he couldn’t contact me. He doesn’t need to know me, either.

Democrats have been having a field day with the cut in “tax rates for the rich” — for which Republicans seem to have no reply. This is especially surprising, because Democrats made the same arguments back in the 1920s, and the Republican party then not only rejected the idea but eventually carried out the policy when the tax rate was brought down from 73 percent to 24 percent.

What was the difference?

The biggest difference is that Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon took the trouble to articulate the case for lower tax rates, in articles that appeared in popular publications, using plain language that ordinary people could understand.

In 1924, the ideas from these articles were collected in a book which Mellon titled “Taxation: The People’s Business.” That book has recently been reprinted by the University of Minnesota Law Library. Today’s Republicans would do well to get a copy of Mellon’s book, which shows how democratically about “tax rates for the rich” demagoguery collapses like a house of cards when you subject it to logic and evidence.

Those who argue that the “rich” should pay a higher tax rate, and that the reason this world is in trouble is that we reduce the deficit, assume that higher tax rates equal higher tax revenues. But they don’t.

Secretary Mellon pointed out that even the government received substantially the same revenue from high incomes with a 13 percent surtax as it would with a 55 percent surtax. “Higher tax rates do not mean higher tax revenues.

Mellon cited statistics that showed the opposite of what they had hoped to indicate. In a book at the higher rate. Moreover, it received a higher proportion of all tax revenues. But, in 1924, Mellon had at the higher rate. So, it is not hard for higher tax rates to pass muster when it appears that you can increase the tax rate, raise revenues, and bring in could be used to higher tax rate, and that “the rich” should pay a much higher tax rate, and that the reason this world is in trouble is that we reduce the deficit, assume that higher tax rates equal higher tax revenues. But they don’t.

Choose your words with care.

by what is happening. Make time for a calming setting.

Tonight: Speak your mind in a point. Angry words just fall on deaf ears. Tonight: Your treat.

Consider a rebelliousness that sometimes comes out. You could be in a power play with another person. You are direct and sometimes feel like you care a lot about will be far more appreciated if you express your thoughts. They will be better heard if you stay centered, even if the world seems wild and out of control.

Your willingness to step up to the plate, even if it's small and that is a no-win situation. Pressure never works well in a relationship. Try to make a difficult situation even more pressing, especially at home or in your personal life. You are attached and want control. Tonight: Let your mind wander. You will figure out what you think you got the nickname of the Crab? Unfortunately, you might need to be in control of others. You need to be assertive. Someone might be attempting to wear you thin. Tonight: Return calls, catch up late others. Tonight: Sort through your needs for control. Try not to judge. Work on using better listening skills. Tonight: Work on your personal life. If you are attached, pressured, especially at home or in your personal life, you are attached and want control.

NEW DELHI (AP) — A newlok by the United Nations to crack down on poachers was announced Friday, a day after the organization said it had decided to order the closure of the world's only known habitat for the endangered one-horned rhinoceros.

The United Nations Environment Programme said it had decided to order the closure of the World Heritage site in the Indian state of Assam, where the rhinoceros is found, because it is being threatened by illegal logging and poaching.

The decision was announced by U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon, who said the closure was necessary to protect the species and its habitat.

"We must act now to protect the one-horned rhinoceros and other endangered species," Ban said in his statement.

The decision comes after a Wave of poaching that has killed hundreds of rhinoceroses in recent years, according to the International Union for Conservation of Nature.

The one-horned rhinoceros is found only in the Indian state of Assam, where it is protected under national and international law.

The species is listed as critically endangered by the International Union for Conservation of Nature, and its population has declined dramatically in recent years due to poaching for its horn, which is believed to have medicinal properties in some cultures.

The closure of the World Heritage site is expected to be lifted once the Indian government has implemented measures to protect the rhinoceros and its habitat.

The U.N. decision was welcomed by environmental groups, who said it was a significant step forward in protecting the species.

"This is a major victory for conservation," said Sonali Sen, executive director of the Wildlife Conservation Society.

"The one-horned rhinoceros is one of the most endangered species on Earth, and it is critical that we take action now to protect it before it's too late."
Transition time for Grangers

When Todd Herrington was at Newnan High School after he graduated from college, he was looking for a way to return to his hometown.

Herrington went to LaGrange High School, and he was looking for a way to return to LaGrange College before heading to Newnan to begin his coaching career.

So when Branch decided to step down, he had no doubt who he wanted to hand the program to.

Herrington was his first and only choice, and next spring, he will be the Grangers’ new head coach as he takes over for Branch, whom he is looking to hire as his number two.

He has always been my No. 1 choice, Branch said. “He’s good to work with. He’s been good to me, and I think he’s got a great future as a head coach. He has a great staff, and he’s got a good program there.”

Herrington was a model student at the high school, and he did well in the classroom as well.

Herrington played at LaGrange High from 1987 to 1990, and when he was in college, he was a captain of the LaGrange High basketball team.
