Firefighters respond to structure fire

FRANKFORT (AP) — Senior citizens should shoulder more of the tax burden in cash-strapped Kentucky under recommendations expected to be presented to the state Legislature for consideration next year.

A tax reform panel appointed by Gov. Steve Beshear approved a plan Thursday that could generate about $690 million a year in additional revenue — largely from retirees by taxing more of their pensions. Some $485 million would come from extending the state’s sales tax to household utility bills and a litany of other services that have traditionally been exempt in Kentucky.

Lt. Gov. Jerry Abramson, who chaired the Blue Ribbon Commission on Tax Reform, said convincing lawmakers to go along could be a big task. “If you take the political filter off, some of these are very likely to occur and some are very likely not to occur,” he said Thursday.

Kentucky was hard hit by the economic recession, forcing Beshear to cut about $3.6 billion from the state budget since he took office in 2007. He appointed the commission to recommend a simpler tax code that would generate enough revenue to meet state needs even during recessions.

Abramson said the recommendations will be presented to Beshear by Dec. 17 in hopes of having legislation ready for lawmakers to consider when they convene next month.

Beshear has said he’s not sure lawmakers will have time to pass tax reforms in the legislative session, which is scheduled to end in mid-March. He said he’s prepared to call a special session and keep lawmakers on the job longer if necessary.

State Rep. Jim Wood, a Louisville Democrat who serves on the commission, said the recommendations would provide a welcome cash infusion for government programs and services.

"It's not what we need, but it's what we have," Wood said. Wayne said the proposals would be phased in over a period of years to hopefully stabilize the middle-income and the wealthy would pay slightly more.

Wayne said the state's financially troubled pension system for retired government employees could absorb almost all of the proposed new revenue. The pension system needs an additional $100 million a year.

Special to the Daily News

The Middlesboro Garden Club met on Nov. 13 at the Arthur Museum for the monthly meeting.

Donna Smith, master gardener and club president, gave the 12 ladies in attendance an informative speech on how to build good soil.

After the speech, members were served refreshments for the meeting. Smith also delivered and Vicki Byrne.

At the meeting, Smith was awarded a blue ribbon for her beautiful angel wing begonia house plant. The Civic Beautification Committee reported that plants were purchased for a new mini garden to be planted between the hospital and John Brown's office.

The garden club also met on Nov. 27 at the Arthur Museum. Club members decorated the Christmas tree with Victorian ornaments. The outside of the museum was adorned with wreaths, holly, and lights.

Everyone was encouraged to come to the museum and walk through the garden and tour the museum. The Victorian Garden is a public garden and everyone is encouraged to visit.

After the museum was decorated in Christmas finery, a luncheon was served. Hostesses were sisters, Ann Shumate and Kelly Smith.

The annual business meeting will be held Jan. 6.

Memorial Tree of Light event announced

MIDDLESBORO — Middlesboro ARH Hospital announces its fourth annual Memorial Tree of Light event, which will be held on Dec. 20 at 6:30 p.m. in the hospital's main entrance.

“We all have loved ones we miss—especially at Christmas,” said Michael Shafter, Middlesboro ARH Community CEO. “The Memorial Tree offers the community an opportunity to honor their loved ones who have passed and share a special time with others who are mourning in their cherished memories.”

Each year the Memorial Tree of Light event is organized by the Middlesboro ARH Auxiliary, a dedicated group of volunteers who donate their time and energy by assisting with hospital programs and events and holding fund-raisers to purchase needed items for hospital departments.

To make the Memorial Tree of Light event a success, the Middlesboro ARH Auxiliary is requesting a $5 donation for each light that is placed on the memorial tree. At the time you donate your $5, you will be asked to write the name of the person you would like to honor. Once each name is written on a memorial card, it will be created to honor this loved one and displayed in the front lobby of the hospital until Jan. 4, 2013.

The Memorial Tree of Light has been erected in the front of the hospital outside the main lobby entrance. During the tree lighting ceremony, music will be provided by the Pump Springs Baptist Church choir, led by Billie Dishner, and Robbie Parks will play guitar and sing with his wife, the song “Mary, Did You Know?” Billie Booth will read the “Christmas Story.”

The name on each memorial card will be read and their memory honored by the lighting of the tree. After the ceremony light refreshments will be served.

“The Christmas season can be difficult when a loved one has passed,” said John Nelson, auxiliary member and patient advocate, at 606-658-6601.

Christmas offers many unique opportunities

The meaning of Christmas and especially the singing of the holy lyrics brought back to mind each and every year, the birth of Jesus. The little baby in the manger... Thos who sang, "Away in a manger..." was an overlooked piece of history... Each year, the song brings back memories of childhood and the spirit of the season. For me, Christmas is a time to reflect and to reconnect with the past. This year, I decided to take a moment to think about the true meaning of Christmas and to reflect on my own personal experiences with the holiday.

Christmas is a time for reflection and introspection. It is a time to reconnect with the past and to remember the people and events that have shaped our lives. For me, Christmas has always been a time to reflect on my own life and to think about the things that are important to me.

For many people, Christmas is a time to think about their family and their relationships. It is a time to spend time with loved ones and to enjoy each other's company. For me, Christmas is a time to enjoy the company of my family and to spend time with my loved ones.

Christmas is also a time to think about our relationships with others. It is a time to reflect on the ways in which we interact with the people in our lives. For me, Christmas is a time to think about the ways in which I interact with others and to consider the impact that my actions have on those around me.

Christmas is a time to think about the world around us. It is a time to reflect on the state of the world and to consider the challenges that we face as a society. For me, Christmas is a time to think about the world around us and to consider the ways in which we can make a positive impact.

Christmas is a time to think about the future. It is a time to imagine what the world will be like in the years to come. For me, Christmas is a time to think about the future and to consider the possibilities that lie ahead.

Christmas is a time to reflect on the past, the present, and the future. It is a time to think about our relationships with others and to consider the impact that our actions have on those around us. It is a time to think about the world around us and to consider the challenges that we face as a society. It is a time to think about the future and to consider the possibilities that lie ahead. Fear and anger are natural human emotions and it is probably appropriate to feel them in the appropriate circumstances. These emotions, which are closely allied with our belief in a "light or light" ecosystem, are natural mechanisms for self-preservation. It is really a good thing to feel fear when there is a potential threat to our life and anger when there is a need to protect ourselves. In this context, fear and anger are not necessarily bad. In fact, they can be helpful. However, they can also be harmful if we let them get out of control or when they are not directed toward a specific goal.

Fear is a natural response to perceived danger or threat. It helps us to recognize and avoid potential harm. Anger is a natural response to perceived injustice or wrong. It helps us to take action to right what is wrong. Both fear and anger can be useful in helping us to keep ourselves safe and protected.

However, fear and anger are also emotions that we need to control. They can be overwhelming and can lead to impulsive actions. It is important to keep them in check and to use them in a constructive way. When we are afraid or angry, we should try to take a deep breath and think about the situation before acting.

If we let fear and anger get out of control, they can become a barrier to our well-being. They can prevent us from making decisions and from taking action. It is important to understand that fear and anger are not always helpful. They can be harmful if we let them get out of control.

It is important to practice self-awareness and to learn how to manage fear and anger. We can do this by taking time for ourselves to reflect on our emotions and by finding ways to channel them in a positive way. We can also seek support from others who can help us to understand and manage our emotions.

For example, we can practice relaxation techniques such as deep breathing or meditation to help us to calm our minds. We can also try to focus on positive thoughts and to look for ways to change our perspective. We can also talk to others about our fears and anger and seek support from those who can help us to understand and manage our emotions.

In conclusion, fear and anger are natural emotions that we need to control. They can be useful in helping us to protect ourselves and to take action. However, they can also be harmful if we let them get out of control. It is important to practice self-awareness and to find ways to manage our emotions in a positive way.

He who is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he who rules his spirit than he who takes a city. R.S.V. Proverbs 16:32

Fast track disability process will now include 200 conditions

Michael J. Astene, Commissioner and General Counsel, anounced 35 additional Compa-nionate Allowances. The program is in effect bringing the total number of conditions in the expedited disability process to 205. Companionate Allowances are a way to quickly identify disabilities and other medical conditions that affect children. The program fast-tracks disability de-sion making that affects children with the most severe disabilities or requiring treatment that runs within days instead of months. The new conditions primarily include certain types of cancers, adult brain disorders, and a number of rare disorders that affect children.

The agency has also achieved another milestone for the Companionate Allowances program, reaching 200 conditions," Commissioner Astene said. "Nearly 200,000 people with severe disabilities and their families have been notified since it began in October 2008." By design, these conditions are so severe that Social Security does not need to fully develop the applicant’s work history and earnings records as a result, Social Security eliminates the disability determination process for people who have a condition on the list. Social Security has heard seven public hearings and worked with experts to develop the list of Companionate Allowances.

Review: ‘Need for Speed,’ ‘Forza’ hit the gas

LOU KENEST
Associated Press

Holiday-season TV ads would have you believe that lots of people get some great cars this Christmas. With giant bows on top.

I hate to play Scrooge, but you probably aren’t one of those people. But you can still be festive for one and car when you can buy one. These rides are virtual or made of digital winds? No, when there are these vehicles out on the road and they are worry about insurer limits?

“Need for Speed: Most Wanted” is a game for the Xbox 360, PlayStation 3, $59.99, PC, $49.99) is the most gloriously irresponsible of this year’s racing games. It was developed by Criterion Games, the British studio best known for the “Burnout” franchise, and it shares that series’ obsession with reckless driving.

“Most Wanted” is set in a sprawling-open world environment called Rushmore City, which is more of a grid of roads than a plausible place to live. While cruising the streets, you can occasionally be stopped by pedestrians and other cars, inviting you to participate in impromptu races. In sprint and circuit races, the objective is just to get to the finish line, while in the ambush and pursuit races, you have to escape the police.

In “Forza Horizon,” you can choose from a variety of cars, including some of the world’s most exotic and expensive. The game is set in a fictional Horizon that looks like Le Mans, the new “Forza” map, and it takes the fictional Horizon to the next level.

I found this game’s “Forza Horizon” driving, with its gadgets, to be a bit more interesting in party play. You can ignore all that once you’ve improved your car, and with hundreds of challenges, there’s no shortage of action.

Most events are point-to-point races or multi-stage races through themed circuits, but there are also occasional street races and “showcase” events against opponents or online. You have plenty of opportunities to make use of your car’s potential.

In between races, you can adjust points with dangerous driving, such as changing the speed cameras or passing other cars. It’s a fast-paced, high-speed experience.

The big difference in these two games is that you have to keep an eye on your gas and speed limit, whereas in “Forza Horizon,” you can drive as fast as you want. You can also jump around Fairhaven, flying off ramps and running through billboards, and it’s a blast.

Hunters bagged a record number of deer during modern gun season

FRANKFORT—Hunters bagged a record number of deer during Kentucky’s modern gun season, which ended Monday.

“The 92,737 deer reported taken is a new record, surpassing the previous record of 87,616 in 2004,” said Tina Brunjes, deer and elk program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. “That’s what happens when you get good hunting weather all three weekends of the season. No rain, no snow. It’s the first time it’s happened since I came here in 2006.”

Kentucky’s deer herd is estimated to be more than 900,000. “In some areas, our deer herd could sustain a larger doe harvest than what our hunters take each year,” said Brunjes. “In other areas, better management practices may be needed to sustain a similar harvest.”

According to the preliminary harvest results posted on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website as of Wednesday, Nov. 28, a new record was set for the first time, the September deer harvest exceeded 30,000 for the season was 117,951, according to deer harvest results posted on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website as of Wednesday, Nov. 28, a new record was set for the first time, the September deer harvest exceeded 30,000.

The harvest for the month of November won’t be known until the end of the month on Friday, Nov. 30. However, as of Wednesday, Nov. 28, a new record has already been reached. The 96,996 deer reported taken tops the previous record (91,014 deer taken in 2004) by 8.3 percent.

At this point in the season the top 10 Kentucky counties in deer harvest are: Owen, 7,444; Pendleton, 7,364; Crittenden, 7,756; Green, 6,717; Christian, 2,456; Shelby, 2,252; Grant, 2,075; Hardin, 1,945; Boone, 1,911; and Breckinridge, 1,862.

Kentucky’s all-time record deer harvest of 124,752, may be eclipsed, too. “We have a really good chance it’ll be good weather for the late muzzleloader and the best hunting weather in the state,” said Brunjes.

As of Wednesday, Nov. 28, the total deer harvest for the season was 117,011, according to deer harvest results posted on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website as of Wednesday, Nov. 28, the total deer harvest for the season was 117,011.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife offering gift certificates

FRANKFORT (AP) — Looking for a gift for a friend or family member who likes to hunt or fish? The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources has an idea.

The agency is offering gift certificates that can be purchased online and used for hunting and fishing licenses, permits or for the department’s magazine, Kentucky Afield.

The buyer can print a gift certificate or have the recipient notified by email. The recipient will receive a code to use for purchases on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website for five years from the date of purchase.

The gift certificates are available at http://belk.com with assistance available to determine the cost of licenses and permits.

Good season for rabbit hunting expected

FRANKFORT (AP) — With rabbit and quail hunting season starting in Kentucky, wildlife officials say hunters can expect a good season in both. The same amount of quail as last year.

Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife says observers are seeing the most rabbits in eastern Kentucky. “In some areas, our rabbit herd could sustain a larger harvest than what our hunters take each year,” said Brunjes. “In other areas, better management practices may be needed to sustain a similar harvest.”

The statewide bag limit is four rabbits and eight quail.

Hunters bagged a record number of deer during modern gun season

FRANKFORT—Hunters bagged a record number of deer during Kentucky’s modern gun season, which ended Monday.

“The 92,737 deer reported taken is a new record, surpassing the previous record of 87,616 in 2004,” said Tina Brunjes, deer and elk program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. “That’s what happens when you get good hunting weather all three weekends of the season. No rain, no snow. It’s the first time it’s happened since I came here in 2006.”

Kentucky’s deer herd is estimated to be more than 900,000. “In some areas, our deer herd could sustain a larger doe harvest than what our hunters take each year,” said Brunjes. “In other areas, better management practices may be needed to sustain a similar harvest.”

According to the preliminary harvest results posted on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website as of Wednesday, Nov. 28, a new record was set for the first time, the September deer harvest exceeded 30,000 for the season was 117,951, according to deer harvest results posted on the Kentucky Fish and Wildlife website as of Wednesday, Nov. 28, a new record was set for the first time, the September deer harvest exceeded 30,000.
