Christmas marches through La Jolla with 55th annual parade

Float winners:
- Best Overall — Stella Maris Academy
- Most Community Spirit — Windansea Surf Club
- Santa’s Favorite — LJ Presbyterian Pre-School
- Most Original — All Hallows Academy
- Most Colorful — La Jolla Kiwanis

The parade saw everything from camels, horses and dogs to elves, the Grinch and Santa himself come down the streets of La Jolla. Newly elected Congressman Scott Peters, left, made an appearance, as did UCSD chancellor Pradeep Khosla, below. The UC High Centurion band entertained, right center, and the Wells Fargo stagecoach celebrated times past, center, top.

La Jolla High School sent its elf brigade, above, while the Girl Scout Pacific Jewel Service Unit dressed for the occasion, left. Even pets put on their holiday best.

Coastkeeper water-monitoring program helps keep county on higher ground

Volunteer training upcoming for watchdog group’s data collection, analysis

If you laid San Diego County’s 4,200 square miles end to end, the line would stretch from Honolulu to Chicago. Of the nation’s 3,000 counties, San Diego has the 12th largest farm economy and is the fifth most populous, with its 3.14 million population representing a 10 percent increase over the year 2000. Its coastline alone stretches 70 miles and takes about 90 minutes to drive. The last statistic concerns San Diego Coastkeeper the most. A 2011 study by the environmental watchdog said all that size and activity (coupled with the county’s aging drainage infrastructure) has meant increased pollution levels in the county’s 11 watersheds that feed into the Pacific Ocean. But another set of numbers reflects Coastkeeper’s efforts in stemming the flow of the bad stuff — and for one official, the people behind the stats make all the difference in the group’s effectiveness.

One Saturday a month, a core of Coastkeeper volunteers take to the county’s waterways at 40 locations that feed into nine of the 11 area watersheds, loading up on samples for presentation of data to various state and local environmental offices and the Environmental Protection Agency. It’s not as easy as it sounds, because the volunteers do more than gather samples. “It has been a joy to celebrate so many incredible Jewish teens over the past six years and to support their vision of tikkun olam, or ‘repairing the world.’”

Coastkeeper recently announced its 2013 volunteer-monitoring schedule, which begins with training sessions on Jan. 26 and continues March 16, May 18, July 20, Sept. 14 and Nov. 16. The last sample collection of 2012 takes place on Saturday, Dec. 15. Sample collections in 2013 take place beginning Feb. 23 and continue April 20, June 22, Aug. 17, Oct. 19 and Nov. 16.

Group seeks caretakers raising others’ children

The nonprofit organization Grandparents As Parents (GAP) is seeking out grandparents or non-parental relatives who are taking care of a relative’s child because of a death in the family, parental drug or alcohol use, mental illness, neglect or incarceration, among other reasons a child may be separated from their home. GAP recognizes the impact created on these caretakers’ lives and the requirement for many of these relatives to enact a prompt, total change in lifestyle to care for at-risk youth. GAP provides cost-free community-based programs, services and urgent resources to grandparents or others raising children. For any grandparents or relatives who want to learn more about GAP’s services, visit www.grandparentsasparents.org or call (818) 264-0880. GAP is also partnering with Y Kids Ship Support Groups and Toys For Tots for a pancake breakfast and bowling event on Dec. 15 in Vista to help support programs and services. Anyone interested in attending should RSVP to Suzanne Tracey at educ81@gmail.com or by calling (858) 842-1229.

Jewish teen scholarship seeks recipients

The Helen Diller Family Foundation is seeking out 10 socially conscious Jewish teens from across the nation who dedicate time to make the world a better place through volunteer service projects in their communities. Nominations for the annual Diller Teen Tikkan Olam awards are now open, and this year the foundation will acknowledge more young visionaries than ever before with 10 recipients receiving the $16,000 award nationwide.

Since Bay Area philanthropist Helen Diller made a commitment to empower the next generation of Jewish leaders in 2007 through the award program, 30 teens have been awarded more than $1 million total to advance their vision of tikkan olam, or “repairing the world.”

“It has been a joy to celebrate so many incredible Jewish teens over the past six years and to support their efforts to repair the world,” said Diller, president of the foundation. “The opportunity to empower and nurture teens throughout the entire United States is a dream come true and a simple way to foster the spirit of tikkan olam among our future leaders.”

Teens can be nominated by teachers, community leaders, rabbis and even themselves for the award, though family members cannot nominate a candidate. Teens must be 13 to 19 years old, self-identify as Jewish and must not be compensated for their services to be eligible for nomination. To complete the nomination form, visit www.jewishfed.org/teenawards/process or call (415) 512-6437.

Birch Aquarium has the cure for families’ winter-break boredom

JOHNNY MCDONALD

Birch Aquarium at Scripps is swirling with an assortment of field trips and lectures this winter that encourages exploration, knowledge and adventure.

Discover the SEA

The aquarium’s Science, Exploration and Adventure program, SEA Days, will feature multigenerational learning about cutting-edge research taking place at Scripps Institution of Oceanography (SIO), focusing on current ocean topics with hands-on experiences, key scientists and a chance to interact with climate scientists.

It also provides an ideal venue for students, Scouts and others to meet requirements for “Interview a Scientist” or career-day projects.

Programs are included with aquari- um admission and take place from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the third Saturday of each month.

The next program in the series picks up on Dec. 15 with “Whale of a Tail,” where participants are invited to watch for the gray whale migration from the aquarium’s Tide-Pool Plaza and learn about whales from SIO scientists.

Then, on Jan. 19, come face to face with animals that live in the La Jolla Ecological Reserve and learn about underwater treasures at the fourth annual Underwater Parks Day.

Finally, Feb. 16’s “Plankton Party” will answer the question, “What do algae, crabs and jellies have in common?” The answer: plankton. All of these ocean-dwelling organisms spend a portion or their entire live as plankton. SIO scientists will give the rundown on these “drifters.”

Getting a closer look

Daily whale-watching cruises featuring aquarium naturalists pick back up for the season toward the end of this month. Guests can get up close to a migrating gray whale or even take an expedition to Baja California to witness the breeding of the 20,000 mammals on the expedition conducted submersible operations in the Mariana Trench, the deepest place on earth, and Bartlett’s research will shed light on how organisms thrive in such extreme environments.

Guests can join SIO geochemist James Day on Jan. 14 for “New Insights into the Early History of the Earth and Moon,” which will delve into new insights into the moon’s chemical make-up by examining lunar rocks gathered by Apollo mission astronauts. Advances in technology are offering fresh clues about how the early earth and moon may have formed and evolved.

“Genetics and Gray Whale Behavior” will be the discussion on Feb. 11, presented by Aimee Lang, Southwest Fisheries Science Center marine biologist. Lang and her colleagues are using genetic analyses of gray whales to explore their behavior, migrations and other information critical for managing the gray whale population in the North Pacific.

Past lectures have aired on UCSD-TV and are broadcast to more than 16 million viewers via satellite and cable television. Lectures also can be found on YouTube.

Lectures run from 6:30 to 8 p.m. and are $8 ($5 for students and educators, free for members).

new proposed ordinance calling for it to include boats and trailers. “Clearly, a lot of the problem is boats and trailers — they’re just a hazard,” said Zapf. “A lot of our public right-of-way is being used and abused, almost to the point of there being free storage on our public streets.”

This place is fantastic! My fiance went here to buy a tux for himself and to look for rentals for our upcoming wedding. At first we didn’t want to go here because we figured, being in Birdrock, it would be more on the expensive side. After a terrible experience at another tuxedo shop, we decided to give A Better Deal a try. I am SO happy we did! Not only was the experience far better than where we had been, but the quality of tuxedos are fantastic, and they ended up being cheaper for his groomsmen to rent! Score!

We also had a hiccup and had to push back the wedding after we went in for our first appointment. When I called to explain, they were so accommodating and even let us come back to try on different tuxes months later even though we had already purchased a tux and it had come in.

McBride captures women’s singles title in La Jolla

Top-seeded Dina McBride of Valencia erased the memory of last year’s final as she defeated Ros Nideffer of San Diego, 7-5, 6-2, to win the women’s singles title at the USTA National 40 Hard Court Championships at the La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club. McBride, a former collegiate tennis star at the University of San Diego, reached the women’s singles final a year ago, but had to retire early in the match as she suffered a torn Achilles tendon. Despite playing only one set of singles during her recovery this past year, McBride entered the tournament and made an incredible run to the title.

McBride trailed Nideffer 4-5 as she served to stay in the first set. After holding serve to tie the score at 5-5, the 52-year-old Nideffer, a former touring tennis professional, opened the 11th game with a double fault and four points later, McBride broke serve to lead 6-5. McBride served out the set as she fought off a break point and won a hard-fought 14-point game. She then jumped out to a 4-1 second-set lead and served out the match at 5-2 to win the title.

Dec. 14

Founded in 1995, Coastkeeper has been gathering its data since 2000 and has just signed its 700th volunteer. The group’s 2011 watershed report, in its first, noted that 85 recruits collected samples reflecting the health of nine watersheds for 2009-10 from the Tijuana River site to just south of Fallbrook. The majority of the watersheds’ health readings fell into the “fair” category.

No county watershed scored in the “marginal” or “excellent” ranges. While these data may not always augur well, the solutions do — and Pritchard said the volunteers play a vital role to that end for one very important reason.

“Water-quality professionals,” Pritchard said, “are terrible at getting their data out to the public. I know what you mean about the [colossally thick] reports from places like the [California] Coastal Commission and the EPA. [The volunteers] make the collection process faster from our end and not adding to the backlog. They understand our way of using data to tell a story … We are extremely grateful for them.”

Meanwhile, Pritchard said, he can’t overemphasize the slow but sure impact that development and farming can have on a waterway through the depletion of soils and plants. “One slab of concrete [or] the loss of crops,” he said, “diverts the natural flow so the waterway will die a death of a thousand cuts.”

But the volunteers put a human face on the sea of numbers that results, quietly assuring that help is on its way.

For a look at Coastkeeper’s watershed report, visit www.sdcostkeeper.org. For information on how to become a water-quality monitor, email volunteer@sdcostkeeper.org or call the group’s community engagement coordinator at (619) 758-7743, ext.

UTC shines with new tantalizing temptations

To ready film lovers for San Diego's one-and-only opera singing festival, the Lawrence Family Jewish Community Center will host guest filmmaker James L. Freedman, creator of "Glickman," the story of Jewish sports legend Marty Glickman, who will create her flavorful beggar's fish soup complete with potatoes, tomatoes, rosemary and fish. Following the cocktail hour, the chef will perform alongside Baritone Patrick Andersen, pianist John Barnes. Freshman Jay Shankar and guest musician Alexander Gourevitsh — Send. Freshman Jay Shankar will also delight audience members with the musical fusion of blues, spirituals, gospel, rap, hip hop, reggae, African chants, ancient lullabies, jazz improvisation and much more. The concert will begin at 5 p.m. at the campus' Taylor Performance Hall. Tickets are $25 and include stadium seating in the outdoor dining area, which is being cool. When I saw it, I knew it was one of those pieces that would never stop me — and at $248 I can use it now and for the holiday/resort seasons. It is the perfect example of fashion, from ready-to-wear to handbags. It picks up and plays on any color pallet (très chic with all black too!).

For most people, the holiday season is a busy time of the year. From office parties to the ever-growing shopping list, it never seems to end. It's also a time when friends and families get together, so the social calendar is booked to the hilt.

The good news! There are lots of unique things happening, so it's a wonderful time to explore what's new in your backyard. At the newly renovated Westfield UTC, there are two places you'll want to add to your "must see" list. We wanted to see first-hand what the new changes looked like, so we turned it into an all-day adventure.

Our first stop was to indulge our hunger pumps, so we headed over to Seasons 52, a popular, new-to-San Diego restaurant concept that specializes in fresh, low-calorie options for lunch and dinner. The expansive menu changes four times a year and nothing is more than 475 calories, from the custom flatbreads to the mouth-watering entrees like the cedar plank roasted salmon and caramelized sea scallops. This restaurant is a real treat for people who appreciate flavorful foods but don't want to feel guilty afterward. One of our favorites was the organic salmon with fresh farmers market vegetables. The Sonoma goat cheese ravioli and the mesquite-grilled Piedmontese strip steak were also delightful. If you have a sweet tooth like us, you'll be happy to know the 475-calorie dessert menu also extends to its awards-winning mini indulgence desserts, which come in almost any flavor you can think of, including key lime pie, carrot cake, pecan pie (our favorite!) and chocolate peanut butter mousse. The desserts are small in portion and served in a shot-size glass so they look harmless but are "dangerously" good.

The La Jolla Playhouse (LJP) held a celebration recently for the opening of its latest world premiere musical, “Yoshimi Battles the Pink Robots.” It all began with cocktails, specialty drinks and a variety of inventive hors d’oeuvres (ranging from a tofu dish to slow-braised pork shoulder and even glazed Alaskan black cod) provided by Giuseppe Catering.

After guests had had a chance to eat, drink and socialize, LJP board chairman Jeffrey Ressler commanded their attention and introduced Michael Rosenberg (who’d do quite well as a TV talk-show host if he wasn’t already gainfully employed as LJP’s managing director). Rosenberg expressed the theater’s appreciation to the sponsors and supporters who enable LJP to bring new productions to the stage, and without whom there could not be such daring new productions as this one, which require multi-year development cycles before the theater can begin to stage performances and sell tickets.

Rosenberg also thanked Victoria Hamilton, head of San Diego’s Commission for Arts and Culture since its 1988 inception. She stepped down in November, leaving a laudable legacy that includes getting the City Council to commit to doubling arts and culture funding over the next five years.

LJP’s very creative artistic director, Christopher Ashley, then introduced the play’s choreographer, Bradley “Shooz” Rapier, and its director, Des McAnuff (who was Ashley’s predecessor as artistic director from 1984 to 2007). Asked how they arrived at the physical life of this production, the pair revealed that it took seven years to bring it to the stage. Based on the 2002 Flaming Lips album of the same name, with music and lyrics by frontman Wayne Coyne, the play’s story was written and developed by Coyne and McAnuff. It tells of love’s value to life and of the importance of living in the present.

As theater regulars will recall, McAnuff had a truly stellar career at LJP, really pouring his heart into building it up. He feels his role there was his life’s greatest accomplishment. Regardless,

Bistro Pazzo

The whole idea of a Bistro, says Soto-Marsden, owner of Bistro Pazzo, is to offer a neighborhood place where everyone knows you: where great friends and great food meet. Bistro Pazzo is going on its 4th year, located just slightly off the beaten path, just off Prospect Street at 7930 Ivanhoe Ave. The restaurant is the “hidden gem” of La Jolla, as it is just that much more of a neighborhood treasure. Within walking distance to shopping, hotels, the financial district, and the famous beaches of La Jolla. Open for Lunch and Dinner. Bistro Pazzo is pet friendly with a dog friendly patio.

Dr. Kenneth Anderson, his successor, McMuffin said, “I am so grateful and appreciative to you for putting the place in such worthy hands.” Returning the compliment, Ashley said, “No one has ever turned over the artistic reins of a theater more generously than Des.”

Guests adjourned to the theater for the performance, which opened to a packed house. The play tells the story of a woman facing the battle of her life, fighting a form of cancer. Journeying into a fantastical world, the performance, which opened to a packed house, was both entertaining and amaz-ing.

With our appetites fully satisfied, what better way to round out the evening than to check out a movie at the brand-new ArcLight Cinemas? As longtime moviegoers, we thought we had seen it all. But this is truly unique and the type of experience everyone should have at least once, if not more. Unlike some theaters that are cramped and frenzied, ArcLight is all about comfort, catering to the moviegoer. Although customers can buy their tickets upon arrival, moviegoers are encouraged to buy and reserve their seat in advance, which eliminates the mad rush of waiting in line and rushing to save a seat.

At a post-performance party, cast, crew and guests celebrated heartily with drinks, desserts and a DJ. They formed a circle, dancing, with impromptu hip-hop and acrobatic balancing moves that were both entertaining and amaz-ing.

AGR "Silver Linings Playbook" in advance but fortunately we had a helpful staff member walk us through the process. When we finally entered the theater, we were impressed with the ample legroom, soft cushiony seats, not to mention the large screen and crystal-clear sound system. The theater even had a new car smell to its shiny new interior.

ArcLight’s 14-screen feature stadium seating, so there are no bad seats. Our theater seated less than 100 people, giving it an intimate feeling, with ushers on hand to guide guests to their seats. Viewers who get annoyed by excessive talking, texting and late arrivals disrupting their experience will be happy to know ArcLight has a very strict policy when it comes to disturbing the peace: they simply don’t tolerate it.

Our recommendation? Become an ArcLight member so you can take advantage of the theater’s loyalty program, which awards savings and points that can be redeemed for purchases in the sit-down cafe, bar, gift shop or for tickets. www.arclightcinemas.com

My listing, the former home of Dr. Roger and Ellen Revelle has recently sold. The home had been in the Revelle family since 1922 and they are pleased that their beloved home is now owned by a new family who cherishes its beautiful oceanfront setting and fascinating legacy. I am also pleased that I will have wonderful new Barber Tract neighbors!
