Ocean Beach draws into summer on Saturday, June 21 when it hosts the 3rd annual OB Street Fair and Chili Cook-Off Festival.

A perennial Peninsula favorite and one of San Diego’s top defining community celebrations, the OB Street Fair runs from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., with the heart of the festival anchored on Newport Avenue between Sunset Cliffs Boulevard and the beach.

On tap for the all-inclusive event is an Artists’ Alley (see page 6), local food and specialty vendors (see pages 11 and 13), beachfront entertainment (see pages 7 and 12) and beer garden, six stages of live music (see pages 8 and 9), Wonderland Children’s Area with pony rides, demonstrations like skateboard exhibitions, two community mural projects (see page 5) and a sizzling chili cook-off (see page 6). The chili cook-off will be held on the lawn at the foot of Newport Avenue. Cook-off hours are 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. “We really try to ensure that there is something for everyone at the street fair,” said Barbara Iacometti, street fair chairwoman and president of the Ocean Beach MainStreet Association (OBMA), which plans and hosts the event each year.

Chili cook-off serves up sizzling-hot fun

For one group of contestants, it’s a family affair and reason for annual reunion.

By PATRICIA WALSH | THE BEACON

For Ryan and Deborah Knowles, the annual chili cook-off at the OB Street Fair is about love of family and community.

On June 23, they will compete for a fourth year in the competition as the “Red Hot Chili Peckers” — a name that pays homage to the beaks of Ocean Beach’s boisterous wild parrots. The cook-off serves as their annual family reunion; children, brothers, mom, nieces and in-laws join in to set up, serve, tear down and spend a day making memories.

With a full field of 28 contenders — featuring teams named Bar Key Chili, Chief Kiki and OBeeyahh Chili — the cook-off is not an endeavor to be taken lightly.

There’s the expense: a registration fee, food costs, an investment in equipment and decorations. There are requirements: all recipes must be cooked on site or ahead in an industrial kitchen, and contestants need to serve up at least 10 gallons of chili for 5,000 tastings.

There’s also the time involved: Deb handles the details and plans the booth weeks in advance. Ryan spends three days in a restaurant kitchen simmering his recipe to satisfaction. Event day starts at 4 a.m. and ends 12 hours later. None of it guarantees a prize, which has so far eluded the Knowles.

Why spend all that money and time? “It’s for a good cause,” Ryan said. “It helps pay for OB’s Fourth of July fireworks and I dig fireworks.”

Weeks before the competition, Deb and Ryan — the latter a chemist by profession — are at home preparing. Banksy, the family cat, supervises from the couch as Deb goes over logistics and Ryan tweaks his recipe on a small scale.

The result is a spicy, meaty broth with smoke and heat. Paired with Ryan’s homemade bread, it is a palate pleaser.

Here’s how the Ocean Beach Street Fair’s chili cook-off works:

Time: The cook-off takes place at the street fair at the foot of Newport Avenue from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. on June 23. Winners will be announced on the main stage.

Community murals help bind local spirit; will fete OB’s 125th anniversary

Long before the advent of online social networking, people were connecting through community art and, in the process, giving neighborhoods a sense of history and identity.

In Ocean Beach, community murals located on buildings around the neighborhood capture the essence of the seaside town. Defining and engaging, mural themes range from surfing to cars and flag-waving Americana.

In June 23, visitors to the 33rd annual OB Street Fair and Chili Cook-Off Festival will have the opportunity to bring two new community murals to life. The first mural is a surfboard theme. The second mural will commemorate Ocean Beach’s 125th anniversary.

Both murals offer good old-fashioned tactile face-to-face social networking with a purpose.

“IT’S NOT ONLY A LOT OF FUN FOR PEOPLE WHO PARTICIPATE, BUT IT IS A SIGNIFICANT PART OF OCEAN BEACH’S BEAUTIFICATION. PEOPLE LOVE COMING DOWN AND SEEING ALL THE ART WE HAVE DISPLAYED ACROSS TOWN.”

BARBARA IACOMETTI
Chairwoman, OB Street Fair

To participate, purchase a pre-illustrated tile for $10, dip brushes into paint and follow the instructions on the palette.

“It’s a really lively part of the festival. People who participate in the Artists’ Alley create whatever they’re selling by hand themselves. So, it’s a real unique component of the fair.”

Liz Greene, creative director of the Ocean Beach MainStreet Association, said the area is a mini art festival in itself, which sells out its space well in advance of the festival.

“It’s a really lively part of the event,” Greene said. “People who participate in Artists’ Alley create whatever they’re selling by hand themselves. So, it’s a real unique component of the fair.

“We do have other booths throughout Newport Avenue that have some handmade things or there are people who might be selling other people’s handmade things,” she said. “And then, of course, we have sunglass and straw hat people and so on. But this area is strictly for the people who make a living by supporting themselves through their artwork.”

Art lovers will be in heaven with this year’s Artists’ Alley at the street fair — a popular feature of the event that continues to grow annually.
One of the most alluring aspects of the Ocean Beach Street Fair and Chili Cook-Off Festival is the outdoor musical entertainment, shown here at the Main Stage with the ocean and OB Pier in the background. Organizers are adding one stage this year, bringing the total number of stage locations to six. To top things off, there will also be nearly 40 musical acts performing this year.

Putting music diversity in front and on center stage
39 acts ready to rock the house in six locations

By BART MENDEZA | THE BEACON

Now in its 33rd year, there are few events in San Diego that compare to the Ocean Beach Street Fair. From the scenic beach to a wide variety of vendors, the festival offers up a wonderful, free, daylong experience for the whole family. While there is no shortage of activities, the musical component of the street fair is one of the event’s biggest draws.

Booked by Ted Wigler, owner of Winston’s Beach Club and the 710 Beach Club — along with Michael Head of Head Trap Recording Studios — the 2012 Ocean Beach Street Fair will include six stages, featuring music from 39 performance acts. Everything from New Orleans-style jazz to indie rock is on the menu.

“We pick from an array of local and national bands with all different styles,” said Head. “This year we’re celebrating 125 years of OB, so we tried to have a great showing of artists based in the area.”

With tens of thousands of guests, it’s clear that a spot on the street fair bill is a prime gig for any artist.

“We get hundreds of physical and web submissions, so it’s not hard to fill the slots,” Head said.

The stages follow general themes, based on their location. The Artists’ Alley Stage will feature roots, blues and jazz; Wonderland will host groove, acoustic and kids. The Bacon Sun Stage will feature rock, pop and Americana, while the 92107 OB Stage will play host to the most diverse types of acts and genres, with a focus on Ocean Beach musical artists.

“With an array of local and national bands with all different styles,” said Head. “We’re celebrating 125 years of OB, so we tried to have a great showing of artists based in the area.”

With 39 performance acts taking part in this year’s street fair, there is no shortage of options for world-class entertainment. The music kicks off at 10 a.m., with all stages accessible to all ages. Here are a few of this year’s highlights:

Kim Monroe & Chris Eves / Bacon Sun Stage, 11 a.m.
Hailing from New York, singer-songwriter Kim Monroe performs Americana tunes, highlighted by the slide guitar and harmony vocals of Chris Eves.

Todo Mundo / Wonderland Stage, 3:45 p.m.
Performing world music with a difference, Todo Mundo includes Latin influences, as well as touches of folk and reggae, for a sound that’s heavy on rhythm and 100 percent danceable.

Bad Science Fiction / 92107 Stage, 4:30 p.m.
Difficult to pigeonhole, Bad Science Fiction is equal parts indie rock, Americana, experimental music and fun.

Jet West, right, is among the local bands catching fire and building a following in Ocean Beach and abroad.

Skid Roper / Wonderland Stage, 5 p.m.
Perhaps best known as half of a duo with Mojo Nixon during the 1980s, Skid Roper is a San Diego institution and musical virtuoso. For this performance Roper will be in surf-music mode, playing a mix of classic and originals.

Stoney B Blues Band / Artists Alley Stage, 6 p.m.
One of the busiest combos in town, The Stoney B Blues Band is custom-made to get a crowd dancing and having a good time. Arriving in San Diego from New Orleans post Hurricane Katrina, Stoney B and his crew have quickly established themselves as one of the premier blues acts in the Southland.

People who live or work in Ocean Beach know it oozes community like few other places. And salon owner Renee Pitera revels in that sense of “closeness, camaraderie and pride.”

So when there’s a chance to help the community that has supported her Renovation Hair Salon for 16 years, she’s eager to step up.

“Anyone who’s been around OB for a long time is eager to help out,” said Pitera, a mother of five kids — and three dogs.

And that’s why she’s participating in the 33rd annual Ocean Beach Street Fair and Chili Cook-Off Festival for the 16th time, once again donating all her proceeds from the event to local causes.

This year, she will split the money between the Ocean Beach MainStreet Association’s Fourth of July fireworks show and Hedy’s Cause, which helps support a young San Diego grandmother who’s fighting brain cancer.

In past years, Pitera has supported the Susan G. Komen for the Cure, Lance Armstrong’s LIVESTRONG organization and the Red Cross tsunami fund.

She and about seven other hairdressers, including volunteers from the California Hair Design Academy, will wield scissors and clippers this year at her booth on Newport Avenue near Hodad’s.

The suggested donation for a haircut is $10.

Pitera said she anticipates cutting and styling hair for up to 200 people. Fundraising at the event, she said, not only helps the community, but her own business as well. Over the years, her participation in local activities has brought many loyal customers to her salon across from the beach, above Nick’s at the Pier restaurant.

Her other volunteer work includes serving as her daughter’s class librarian at St. Columba School and joining Dog Beach cleanups, as well as helping at the Surfrider Foundation beach cleanups and Paddle for Clean Water event. She and her staff have participated in an AIDS walk and a Red Cross Cut-a-thon — haircuts on the sand — to raise money for Hurricane Katrina victims.

Her children, too, have joined in at events like tree planting along Cable Street and participating in the annual Ocean Beach Holiday Parade, where they helped decorate a vintage rental car last year.

“I believe you get out of life what you put into it,” Pitera said. “I’ve been blessed with a healthy family, a great business, an awesome community and the San Diego sunshine.”

FESTIVAL PROFILE
Iacometti keeps event on track from cradle to grave
By BART MENDOZA | THE BEACON

The Ocean Beach Street Fair & Chili Cook-Off Festival is truly a grassroots event, largely run by volunteers, many of whom have been involved for years. One key volunteer player is Barbara Iacometti.

Co-owner of Details Salon and Spa (4993 Niagara Ave., #205) for the past 22 years, Iacometti sits on the board of the Ocean Beach MainStreet Association, volunteering for several more committees and serving as the Ocean Beach Street Fair chairman for the last four years.

In her time as a volunteer, she has handled everything from distribution of event T-shirts to preparing the donation cans at businesses.

Iacometti considers volunteering to be an important part of being an Ocean Beach resident.

“Personally, I would always want to volunteer because it’s more fun to be part of something rather than just go to it,” she said.

Her favorite part of the event, however, is just before the crowds arrive and just after they leave.

“As a chairman, I walk onto the street at 3 o’clock in the morning, when people are still heading home from the bars from the previous night,” said Iacometti. “I get to watch Ocean Beach transform as the streets empty and spaces are marked, things are set up, items are delivered.

‘I get to watch the whole thing come to be,’” she said. “I spend the day there with an amazing mix of people attending, and then see it all come down so that by the next day everything is back to normal.”

As a business owner, she notes the Ocean Beach Street Fair has had a major, positive impact on local businesses.

“It makes people aware that OB is on the map,” Iacometti said. “People come from all over and they get to see what’s here, so anything that brings people into OB is huge for business. We’re expecting upward of 70,000 people here that day.”

She said that beyond the entertainment value and good vibes, the Street Fair has a larger purpose.

“The profit that we make is what funds everything else in the area for the year, from the annual fireworks to trash pick-up,” she said.

Iacometti said she plans to continue volunteering for years to come, both from a sense of civic duty and because it’s fun.

“Volunteers are key to the event,” Iacometti said. “Just about everyone working on it is unpaid. They’re important because they make the street fair happen. If we didn’t have volunteers, we wouldn’t have an event.”
