State Sen. Toni Atkins discusses impact of climate change in Point Loma

ONE advantage of the California State Senate pro Tempore hailing from San Diego is that issues affecting the southernmost areas of the Golden State are being addressed at the highest level of government. As she jokes, California does not end in Los Angeles.

State Sen.ator Toni Atkins has been in San Diego talking to constituents and other stakeholders while the Legislature is on break. As she looks ahead to next year, addressing coastal erosion is at the top of her agenda.

She brought up the issue of climate change at a recent talk at the Point Loma Association when a constituent asked about the erosion of Sunset Cliffs amid fears the bluffs will collapse.

“The individual sort of responded, ‘Well, that’s not what I’m talking about,’ I’m like, ‘Well, that is what we’re talking about.’ Because the wave patterns and the sea level rise — climate change is all impacting that,” Atkins said in an interview later that day.

As leaders in the public space struggle to not only mitigate climate change, they also must figure out how to talk about it. The world getting apocalyptically hot can seem abstract, so at these town hall meetings, Atkins is working on describing how a hotter planet has already affected the daily experiences of people in California.

“I love the big stuff, but you gotta be able to bring it all the way down to focus on what it means for your life today, tomorrow,” Atkins said. “I’m so excited about being able to do that on climate change.”

In October, Midway-Pacific Highway Community Planning Group heard about San Diego International Airport’s new development plan, as well as agreeing in principle to further reform of electric scooter regulations.

Brendan Reed, SDIA’s director of planning and environmental affairs, chided community planners on the need to develop new developments with the ongoing remodel of Terminal 1, which accommodated 2.5 million passengers annually when it opened in 1967.

“SDIA now serves more than 24 million passengers a year and one million international passengers,” Reed said adding international travelers “stay longer and spend more money.”

Reed noted SDIA will always be restricted by its single runway, adding it is only one of five U.S. airports that has a mandatory departure runway flow from 11:30 p.m. to 30 a.m.

Characterizing airport Terminal 1 now as “very crowded with long lines,” Reed said the airport’s new development plan seeks to streamline operations. That plan envisions potential upgrades to the airport’s roadway and intersections leading to it, as well as improving its transit connectivity.

“We’re continuing to explore a trolley extension to the airport with things like a people mover in a tunnel or a monorail,” Reed said adding a new shuttle service will open soon providing service every 15 minutes from Old Town Trolley Station to SDIA.

Concerning a possible new transit hub linking with the airport, Reed said a decision has not yet been made on where that might be located. One spot proposed is the NAVWAR facility on Pacific Highway.

“The perception is that that is a done deal,” said MJPIC chair Cathy Kenton. “Most of us share concerns about the NAVWAR site being redeveloped as a grand central station or mobile hub. We want to have a seat at the table and provide some input.”

SDIA’s development plan is available at san.org. Public comments on it are due by Nov. 4.

On scooters, Bill Zent from Pacific Beach, who started an online petition at scooterban.com, gave a presentation asking Midway planners to endorse San Diego City Councilmember Barbara Bry’s call for a six-month moratorium on scooters to give the city time to craft more sensible regulations for them.

In October, Peninsula Community Planning Board approved plans for converting a motel into a hotel, as well as sharing stories and accolades about late community activist Jarvis Ross.

Architect Amanda Mauceri of Vista Investments, which owns the hotel-conversion site at 1325 Scott St., presented on the project, which would demolish an existing two-story 40-room motel and construct a new three-story 87,270-square-foot, 91-room hotel with a pool and underground parking in its place on the 0.62-acre site. Plans call for constructing 11,500 square feet of public space on the hotel’s ground floor with a lobby, lounge, conference area, 14 guest rooms, a fitness room, and a café/nighttime bar.

“The amenities on the ground floor are lobby space with a lounge, a swimming pool, a café, a bar, and a plant,” said Mauceri. “That will be a really nice space with guest rooms on the upper floors.”

Mauceri noted the new hotel will be among the AC Hotel by Marriott international chain, pointing out there will be meeting room space available for rent. She added the project’s fitness room will be small, and the café/bar will have lighter fare because it won’t have a full kitchen and the restaurant will have limited service.

Mauceri described the new hotel’s design as “California Coastal using natural materials, like wood, in the facade. We didn’t want it to be too modern that it feels dated by the time it’s built.”

Board member Mark Krencik suggested some of the new hotel’s meeting space could be dedicated as a community meeting space.

Plans group members also paid homage to late community activist Jarvis Ross, who had been a board member for the better part of the past 20 years and was an outspoken community activist. Krencik spoke for all in noting that one thing he will always remember about Ross was that he was always there.

Mauceri recounted one Ross remembrance. “Jarvis told me he’d always wanted to be an architect,” he said. “I winked and smiled at him and said, ‘You’d be a good architect.’” Added Krencik, “He was somebody who was stable, somebody that always had an opinion and would voice that opinion.”

Board member Margaret Virissimo praised Ross’s community-mindedness. “He always went to Midway planning meetings, which showed me how much passion, commitment, and dedication he had for all those years,” she said. “You can’t buy that. I will miss him and his feedback, suggestions, and all the love he had for Point Loma.”

Robert Tripp Jackson recalled Ross was active in the community all the way back to the late 1990s. “Every time I went down to a City Council meeting — he would always be there,” Jackson said. “I could tell over the last six months that he was slowing down. But he never gave up. He always showed up, and he was always part of the conversation.”

Ocean Beach Street Stewards cleaning one block at a time

Ocean Beach Street Stewards are sweeping into town ushering in a new era in community beautification.

And, with City staffing levels continually challenged, community volunteers are taking charge doing whatever it takes—cleaning, clearing brush, patrolling—to get the job done.

In July, OB resident and graphic designer Aaron Null planted a seed of community “self-help” in creating a Facebook page, imploring residents to adopt a block to clean each week.

That seed that’s been planted is sending out roots and bearing fruits. “This has gone from literally me and a couple of friends to 70 volunteers now,” said Null, a 10-year OB resident.

Null talked about his muse. “I’ve enjoyed walking around the community and seeing how each block is totally different,” he said. “In summer, trash gets piled up around here.”

Continued Null: “There’s a lot of community energy in OB generally. I thought, ‘How do I take that energy and, utilizing social media, make that energy positive and connect all the community spirit? How do we make that every day, and get people out there?’”

Motivating people to take the initiative to spruce up OB proved less difficult than Null had assumed.

“People have made it a game and voluntary clean-up crews have spread across the community,” noted Null, who keeps an updated map on OB Street Stewards Facebook page showing which blocks have been ‘claimed’ for clean-up by volunteers.

“A lot of people claim the block they live on,” said Null noting blocks designated in green on the Facebook map are filling up fast.

The street stewards clean-up program is gradually spreading to nearby beach communities. “I think Pacific Beach has about 40 volunteers right now, including a lot of families,” said Null.

“What’s been the biggest clean-up task thus far? “Trash and cigarette butts are a huge thing,” answered Null, who pointed out becoming a clean-up volunteer is as easy as picking up a bucket and a trash grabber and getting out there and doing it.

“I’d like to see it happen all around San Diego,” concluded Null. “It gets you excited. It’s pretty cool.”

Broken retaining wall threatens Pointer track season

The wall, approximately 20 feet high and over 100 feet in length, was built in 1960, according to Kelly Lowry, PLHS vice-principal, whose responsibilities include the physical structures on campus.

School district personnel have erected a temporary chain link fence away from the wall to keep students and others out of harm’s way but causing another problem. They also dug holes in the brand new track to put in support beams to hold the wall in place.

With the fence covering most of the school’s track lanes, the school’s track and field teams will not be able to practice in the stadium nor will PLHS be able to host any meets during the spring sports season which is scheduled to begin in early March. These teams have more members than any other at the school.

“We are reaching out to some of our other colleagues around the district to see if we can share their facilities for the track team’s practices and meets,” Lowry said.

The wall, constructed of large pieces of wood held in place by steel beams, separated at its north end where a water pipe can be seen behind the dislodged wall.

“I’ve been told these types of walls have a lifespan of 50 years,” Lowry said, “so this one made it nearly 60.”

Lowry says he has heard estimates of six months needed to replace the wall although PLHS administrators have not yet met with San Diego Unified School District’s Physical Plant Operations team. The district will cover the cost of a new wall.

It is believed a temporary brace will be installed soon, Lowry noted, to stop the wall from further separating from its backing. Also, the school district will be installing fencing to discourage spectators from watching events from the vacant lot above the field’s east end.

FREE YOUTH HEART SCREENINGS

The EPSaveALife Foundation is offering a free, all-community youth heart screening at Point Loma Nazarene University on Sunday, Nov. 3, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Sudden cardiac arrest (SCA) is a leading cause of death in youth under 25 and the No. 1 killer of student-athletes, but heart screenings are not part of regular youth exams. San Diego County alone loses at least 12 kids every year.

The Eric Paredes Save A Life Foundation has provided over 30,000 free heart screenings for youth age 12 to 25, finding about 1 in 300 at risk from an undetectable abnormality or risk factor.

The syndrome can happen without symptoms or warning signs.

HUMANE SOCIETY OFFERS DISCOUNTED MICROCHIPS

During October, San Diego Humane Society is offering discounted microchips on select days in anticipation of Halloween – when shelters typically see a substantial increase in lost pets. The holiday can be scary for pets. Opening doors for trick-or-treaters provides plenty of opportunities for spoiled pets to flee.

San Diego Humane Society will offer $10 microchips at vaccination clinics at the following times at San Diego Campus, 5:00 p.m.; every Thursday in October at 8-10 a.m. Vaccine clinics are limited to the first 75 animals, so arrive early.

Creating wares that you can use at Maek Ceramics

MAEK Ceramics in Ocean Beach is the love child of Michaela Maes and Ryan Shoemaker, who co-own and operate the small business combining both their names and talents.

A native Peninsular and a Point Loma High grad, Ryan and wife Michaela first met in a ceramics class at Point Loma Nazarene University.

“I took it as an elective to fulfill a credit,” recalls Michaela, adding, “Then I just fell in love with it: It’s addicting.”

Why ceramics?

“You get really functional things out of it that you can use,” she replied.

For Ryan, ceramics is self-expression.

“So much of what we do on a daily basis is look at things through a creative lens and re-interpret it,” he said. “Ceramics is a fun way to say, ‘I’ll make things that you can purchase, and you get to see the whole process.’ We make everything here and sell it ourselves. So it’s just kind of this creative lens and reinterpret it,” he said. “Ceramics is a fun way to say, ‘I’ll make things that you can purchase, and you get to see the whole process.’ We make everything here and sell it ourselves. So it’s just kind of this transparent chain of production, which is fun for me.”

With the help of their folks, the pair moved up to the Bay Area to start their own company about two years ago.

Since then their fortunes have drawn them back to OB where they’ve inhabited studio space at 1918 Bacon St. since mid-June, they have both been busy crafting mostly custom handmade functional tableware.

They’re first big order was doing tableware for Ryan’s buddies at OB Beans coffeehouse up the street. Business took off from there.

“We get a lot of people coming in doing custom orders, or ordering larger (table) sets when they remodel their kitchens,” he said. “Chefs have just started reaching out to us. So we’re getting more restaurants and more small, high-end retail places reaching out. The largest part of what we do is custom sets.”

Michaela noted they both share a minimalistic perspective on art — and life.

“Our slogan is care more about the stuff when the stuff you have is good for the world, and well made, and just have less of them. You don’t need so much stuff when the stuff you have is quality.”

Admittedly, it’s more costly to handcraft ceramic tableware than to mass-produce it. But you get what you pay for, noted Ryan.

“When you spend more money on stuff, it’s actually worth it for the people around you,” he said. “What we have are handmade pieces, something nobody else has. OB as a community understands that. People living here spend their money here as an investment that helps local businesses. It’s really refreshing when folks come in here, and they’re really on board with that.”

Ryan said they buy their clay by the ton. “We go through probably 50 to 100 pounds a day,” he said.

Maek sells both online and retail. Ryan noted they have tableware products in stock for sale on their website but added, “There are a few different options.”

In the future, Ryan said he’d like to see Maek branch out more.

“In the next few years, we’d love to have a second space to invite people into, where we could have some classes, but also be a space where people can come. It could be a co-op studio where people can pay a fee, then come in and use it.”

Referring to other small crafters like themselves as “makers,” both Ryan and Michaela agree there’s more cooperation than competition in OB.

“We’ve had a lot of fun partnering with other makers,” Ryan said. “We try to be community-oriented, supporting other local makers.”

Buhler's name was then changed to GTD-Golf LLC with much of its staff since that time intact.

In 2014, Good Time Design took over operation at Sail Ho Golf Club at Liberty Station. Sail Ho's name was then changed to The Loma Club.

During the transition of operators. “To be announced soon, the new tenant will enhance the overall experience at The Loma Club, which has served as a landmark in the Point Loma community since the early 1900s and will continue to be a vibrant space for years to come,” she said.

“It is with our deepest regret to have to announce that GTD-Golf, LLC will no longer be operating The Loma Club as of Dec. 31, 2019,” said GTD-Golf spokesperson Karen Robertson. “Although we made every effort to extend the lease, and both the landlord and we worked in good faith, the parties had very different approaches to the property, and unfortunately could not come to an agreement on the terms. We will, therefore, be transitioning the club assets to the landlord for another group to operate The Loma Club.”

Added Robertson: “Thank you for being part of The Loma Club family for the past five years and for all your support. We will sincerely miss all of our amazing customers and clients who have become our family and friends. Please feel free to stop by our venue prior to our last day of business, Dec. 28.”

“It’s a community gathering place that encourages people of all ages to play golf,” Robertson said. “So many of us have great memories here.”

Sail Ho was the original name given to Naval Training Center’s golf course in the 1920s. The golf course has been in operation since 2006 with much of its staff from that time intact.

In 2014, Good Time Design took over operation at Sail Ho Golf Club at Liberty Station. Sail Ho’s name was then changed to The Loma Club.

Following that changeover, the golf club was remodeled with a new outside deck extending the existing restaurant out onto the existing patio and onto the grass. The idea was to showcase the golf course, modernizing the existing golf-club facility making it more “lounge and inviting.” The existing golf building was also remodeled to house an outdoor kitchen and bar.

“I am the massage and honor to serve all who find their way to my studio,” she said. “My mission statement reverberates with love, kindness, compassion, and radiates through the skin’s first impression.”

Tanya Joy’s myriad of services includes microdermabrasion; hydrodermabrasion; a potpourri of facials - Hibiscus Flower, Ocean Collagen, Hawaiian Delight, kiwi, banana, cherry lime and oxygen - firming and toning apple wine and lotus skin peel; waxing; LED facials; GuaSha, and toning apple wine and lotus skin packs with crystal heating pads, and sound therapy with tuning forks,” she said.

Joy remains adamant about embodying the spirit of aloha. “I embody the aloha spirit filled with love, kindness, compassion, hospitality, grace, and touching the souls of others,” she concluded.

Point Loma Association receives $60K for Anchor Lights project

The Point Loma Association (PLA) received a $60,000 grant from the County of San Diego for their upcoming transformational project in the community, themed Anchor Lights, on Rosecrans Street.

Since its founding in 1960, the PLA has worked diligently to enhance the quality of life for peninsula residents, businesses and visitors through the implementation of strategic and impactful public space improvements. The new project, Anchor Lights, is in a reference to the nautical history of the peninsula.

This incredibly generous grant from County Supervisor Cox provides essential project funding, getting the PLA much closer to making Anchor Lights a reality for our community,” said JT Barr, Point Loma Association board member and project lead.

This multi-phased project includes the installation of a series of string lights across Rosecrans Street from Talbot to Cañon Street.

How to sell you home by yourself

When you decide to sell your home, setting your asking price is one of the most important decisions you will ever make. Depending on how a buyer is made aware of your home, price is often the first thing he or she sees, and many homes are discarded by prospective buyers as not being in the appropriate price range.

Your asking price is often your home’s “first impression,” and if you want to realize the most money you can for your home, it’s imperative that you make a good first impression.

A recent study, which compiles 10 years of industry research, has resulted in a new special report entitled “Homesellers: How to Get the Price You Want (and Need).” This will help you understand pricing strategy from three different angles. When taken together, this information will help you price your home to not only sell, but sell at the price you want.

"The article about I Love a Clean O.B. and the OB Merchant's Association having a poster contest— I remember us doing that and it was very successful with many children participating in it. Many merchants displayed posters in their windows. Fanny enough, recently, a woman dropped by the office and was reminiscing about that very event. She said that she was at OB Elementary School and participated in the contest. She remembered with great fondness that she won an award and got to see her colorful poster in the window of one of the stores. She remembers feeling so proud and excited about it. Sweet memory for her and for those of us who were involved." — Denny Knox, Executive Director OBMA

NEWPORT PIZZA

Newport Pizza and Ale House is looking for a new location and will remain open in the mean time. General manager Megan Schuster tells us, “It’s looking very good that we’ll be moving to another nearby property on Newport Avenue. We’re just waiting on the details for signing a lease.” The establishment has been around since 1984, starting originally as a pizzeria before becoming a serious beer bar as well. Its current landlord, Schuster added, “did not want to renew our lease.” Stay tuned for updates. 5050 Newport Ave., 619-224-4540, obpizza.com.

BEST RESTAURANTS

Condé Nast Traveler recently directed its focus on San Diego’s dining scene by citing “23 best restaurants in San Diego, from Ocean Beach and downtown into our urban core. Establishments in Ocean Beach and La Jolla made the list – Little Lion Bistro and Wayfarer Bread & Pastry, respectively.” The former was called out for using fresh California ingredients, particularly in brunch fare. The bistro’s congenial staff and cozy atmosphere were also noted. (1424 Leucadia Blvd., 619-772-3093, thelittlelioncafe.com.) Wayfarer received praise for having “the best sourdough loaves and pastries in town.” Not mentioned in the article is the bakery’s recent reintroduction of pizza night, a popular draw that takes place from 5 to 9 p.m. every Wednesday. (5525 La Jolla Blvd., 858-454-1924, wayfarerbread.com).

UMO SUSHI

From car parts to Japanese rolls, the former auto-repair garage owned by the Ueno family the past 22 years, Sapporo Restaurant at 5049 Newport Ave. in Ocean Beach has undergone a number of reincarnations over the years. “This building has been here forever,” said owner Joe Ueno, who recalls going by his now-Japanese eatery when he was a kid in the 70s when it was a La Piazza. But the historical roots of 5049 Newport Ave. go back even further. “James of the James Gang printer and the OB Historical Society said this place used to have a cigar shop inside back in the ’30s,” said Ueno. “Plans would land in the middle of the dirt road to pick up cigars from the shop that was here.”

Added Ueno, “It has been a restaurant since the 1970s.” One of Sapporo’s past incarnations was a restaurant-bar named Tuba Man’s Grandslam in the 1980s. Tuba Man’s owner back then, Jim Eakle, was known as a performing musician at Padres games. He and his tuba, along with other amateur musicians, formed McShane’s Band. Together, the band would go through the stands playing music encouraging Padres fans to cheer. Of his cuisine, Ueno said: “Our fish is mainly raw served over rice, though we do a lot of spring rolls creating a lot of different layers of fish on top. There are a lot of different flavorings you can do on top of the sushi. It’s just light comfort food that’s not going to weigh you down a whole bunch, not like steak and potatoes or a turkey dinner.”

“We’ve got customers who’ve been coming in for all 22 years,” said Ueno of his clientele, noting one of them, John, “was just here last night. He was here on our first day 2002. He comes in weekly.”

The restaurant owner says he’s happy to keep the menu as it is.

“We have new things all the time,” Ueno said. “We also do more traditional Japanese food every now and then.”

Sapporo’s top two selling items: “Saki and Sapporo beer tops the list every time,” Ueno said. “But Sapporo is now known as much for its outside as its inside. There’s the mural of a Japanese woman adorning the building outside. Inside we’ve got a customer who’s been coming in for all these years, and we call her ‘The Mural Lady.’”

Sapporo Restaurant

Where: 5049 Newport Ave.

Hours: 4-9:30 p.m. Mondays to Thursdays, 1-10 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, 1-8:30 p.m. Sundays.

Sapporo Restaurant owner Joe Ueno said his wife, Michelle, about a year ago when she was working for Ocean Beach MainStreet Association, commissioned the mural to be painted on the side of Sapporo as part of a Shop Saturday promotion.

“She had talked to a local artist who had contacted her about painting murals,” said Ueno. “So she brought him in and we were really surprised how it turned out. We really love it and are really happy with it. It’s our billboard.”

“The mural helps advertise it,” said Ueno. “It’s a new landmark and Instagram spot in the beach community. It’s also close to all the other murals in Chicano Park. It has more murals than any other San Diego community.”

Old Town San Diego State Historic Park will be the scene for Dia de los Muertos, or Day of the Dead, traditionally celebrated throughout Mexico and San Diego Nov. 1 and 2 each year. This year, the festivities will begin Nov. 1 in the Fiesta de Reyes plaza and then head into the state park on Nov. 2 through."}

The state park will host play to a lively celebration full of activities and attractions for the whole family that will be a fitting tribute to those who have gone before us. A professional artist will be painting a gigantic Day of the Dead skull in the middle of the park.

There will also be a public altar on which visitors can place remembrances, many craft stations, a prime wheel, live entertainment, and more. Many of the performances of a specially written Dia de los Muertos play with professional actors, and booths featuring artists, Day of the Dead merchandise, food and drink samples, tamales, face painters and more.

A vibrant Dia de los Muertos parade will proceed around the state park plaza on Saturday at 5 p.m., featuring many local groups and performers.

Larger-than-life puppets will roam the park and pirata will rule the day for kids. Merchants and museums in the state park will host activities and many will be displaying altars dedicated to noteworthy San Diegans created especially for the celebration. An altar map will be available for those wishing to tour them all.

A very popular activity that has grown each year, will exhibit the Walking Dead Graveyard Community Art project on Nov. 1 and 2 where the public can memorialize a loved one or friend in chalk on the sidewalk in the middle of the park.

Adult visitors who wish to raise a glass to the departed can do so in a beer garden on Saturday and live entertainment will fill the park stage both days. There will be a very popular Catrín y Catrina Costume Contest on the plaza stage on Saturday.

As is the custom every year, the Fiesta de Reyes courtyard at the north end of the state park will be full of fanciful, humorous, and visually stimulating décor, offered as tributes to many of San Diego’s early citizens. Many life-sized Catrina skeleton dolls in fancy dress, and many large-than-life-size, hold court at Fiesta de Reyes throughout the fall season.

New displays are added every year, each one trying to outdo the last, so this is not to be missed. This year, there will be more than 50 unique Dia de los Muertos displays in Fiesta de Reyes.

Lively folklorico dancers, dressed in Dia de los Muertos costumes, will be performing on the Fiesta de Reyes stage throughout the celebration, starting on Saturday, Nov. 2 and continuing through Sunday, Nov. 3.

The activities in the state park start at 11 a.m. each day and go until 9 p.m. on Saturday and 5 p.m. on Sunday. The party will continue at the Fiesta de Reyes plaza until 9 p.m. on Sunday. Free parking is available throughout Old Town with extra parking available across Taylor Street in the CalTrans parking lot all day on Saturdays and after 5 p.m. on weekdays.

The Whaley House circa the 1970s.

“While October/Halloween is a fun time of year to tour the Whaley House, and we dress the museum in traditional Victorian mourning complete with casket in the parlor and our focus is more on the ghostly legends of the house, the hauntings seem to happen throughout the year, both morning and night. Sometimes these occur when one is alone and other times whole groups have witnessed strange goings-on,” he said.

If you’re wondering why some- one would want to visit the famous home/now museum, there are a few reasons, he said.

“It has been said that the Whaley House contains more history within its walls than any other building in the city, and I believe that is likely true. So, anyone interested in history or ghost tours should visit the museum a fascinating look at 19th-century San Diego,” he said.

The museum is furnished with period furniture and artifacts, many of which belonged to the Whaley family. Also, people who are interested in the paranormal or fans of any of the many television shows that have filmed here will want to see it in person. While no one can guarantee a ghost will materialize at any time, there is always the chance of an encounter. The Whaley House offers both history and mystery to its visitors.”

F ans of San Diego’s rich rock ‘n’ roll history are getting an early Christmas present this year, with a terrific three-band show. San Diego Rock Icons at Winston’s on Nov. 3. The night will feature emcee Lorah Bodie with three pioneering rock groups: The Blitz Brothers, The Farmers, and Glory, amongst the biggest area combos of their era. ‘“Most of us here in San Diego in the 55-70 age bracket grew up with these bands/ musicians,” said the concert’s organizer, Paul Bolton of Electric Playground Productions. “They were a huge part of our youth, seeing them play in local clubs back in the day. I first saw Glory at Jerry Herrera’s Palace, which I consider the greatest all medium gig. ’Then in ’73 I saw the Blitz Brothers at Ledbetters, Neutral Grounds etc. The Beat Farmers were a band I saw in the early ’80s at many different venues around San Diego.” He notes that the three bands have never performed together on the same bill. “We thought this would be a great show. It’s a ‘remembrance’ of sorts for people around our age.”

Guitarist Jerry Raney will be doing double duty, playing with both The Farmers and Glory. The Farmers’ have suffered the loss of bandmates Dan McClain and Buddy Blue, but with an updated name, and a lineup that includes Raney, bassist Chris Sullivan, drummer Joel Kmak and vocalist Corbin Turner, they remain one of the most popular bands in the area. However, Glory’s first gig in a decade, is pure happenstance. “We really didn’t have a plan to do a reunion, Electric Playground just asked us, and we figured it would be fun,” Raney said. During their initial run Glory opened for the likes of ZZ Top, Steely Dan, Howlin’ Wolf and Bo Diddley, even backing Chuck Berry at a Jack Murphy stadium gig. “He told me we were the best he’d had in many years.” He notes Glory, which also featured bassist Jack Butler and drummer Jack Finney, had a youthful rebel spirit. “We had the attitude, and always felt like we were the coolest thing going,” he said good naturedly. “We always rocked the place and made a big mess.”

“We were probably to be banned from Grossmont High School and every other school we ever played. Grossmont sticks out though because Dan McKin (latter Raney’s bandmate in the Beat Farmers) was the junior class president and hired us. He dug it.”

Though Glory never made it big, bassist Butler is proud of what Glory accomplished. “We were just a band that stuck to our guns and never played the typical popular songs all the other working bands played, we went for deep cuts and originals always,” he said. In 2001, Rockadelic Records issued an album, “On The Air,” featuring a live 1970 KPRI broadcast. Drummer Pinney is looking for-ward to the gig. “It’s like riding a bike,” he said. “We’ll be playing old songs with new arrangements. Chuck Berry, The Pretty Things, The Yardbirds.” Meanwhile, The Blitz Brothers have been back in action since 2011. In their prime, they were a major club draw, playing Jack Murphy Stadium with Cheap Trick and SDSU with Judas Priest, but the trio, now featuring drummer Calvin Lakin and bassist Barney Roach, isn’t resting on their laurels. “We’ll also be doing some classic Blitz’Idio tours, but also two songs from the upcoming (side project) ‘Sons Of Edison 3’ CD. One is an original tune that recently won runner-up in the song of the year contest called ‘Don’t Look Away.’ It’s about the current political world we find ourselves in. We’ll also be covering ‘Tobacco Road’ and ‘California Dreaming.’”

Liven is on his favorite thing about the return of the Blitz Brothers. “It’s seeing so many of our fans that have stuck with us over the span of 46 freakin’ years,” he said. “It’s also a lot of fun to have their support. I still go out and there and give it everything I’ve got at every show. I think I’m really starting to get the hang of it.”

Point Loma mourns community activist Jarvis Ross, 89

P eninsulas reacted to the death of highly pro-f ile community activist Jarvis Ross, 89. A 20-plus-year Point Loma resident, the retired Ross had been an engineering assistant for Underwriters Laboratories, a global safety certification company testing fire protec tion equipment headquartered in Northbrook, Ill. He also had been a licensed real estate agent in Illinois.

Ross had been a member and past president of the Peninsula Community Planning Board, serving since 2000. He also had been a liaison between PCPB and The Point Loma Highway Community Plan Group. A sergeant in the U.S. Army, Ross was also a Kiwanis Club president as well as being chairman of the Architectural Committee of Loma Riviera Community Association 265 Unit HOA. Additionally, he had been a board member with the Save Our Heritage Organization.

Ross was an outspoken proponent of historical structures and maintaining the Peninsula’s current population density. He also espoused a community plan update and representation of the northern part of the Peninsula.

“I appreciated Jarvis’s dedication to the community and our Peninsula,” said PCPB member Margaret Virissimo. “Not only would Jarvis attend PCPB meetings, he was also committed to Midway too. The one thing I remember about Jarvis is that he held the planning group board members accountable to make sure we were doing our jobs to protect the community. Whether he agreed with our decisions or not, he attended all board meetings to provide his feedback and opinions, and after the meetings, he would pull us aside to have conversations about our community to make certain we understood his thoughts. To me, that takes courage, heart, and dedication and was what was most admirable about Mr. Jarvis Ross. He will be very much missed in our community. I appreciated his comments, expertise and heartfelt advice since the first day I joined PCPB.”

“My strongest admiration for Jarvis was that he spoke freely, and he spoke frequently, for or against any number of items of involvement in the Peninsula,” said current PCPB chair Robertt Goldyn. “He was strong-willed and adamant about his concerns. However, he always allowed for, permitted, and accepted other’s opinions to the contrary without any hostility or debate. Jarvis was a voice to be heard, a voice of reason, and a voice of deep concern, respect, and care for the Peninsula community. His presence will be missed.”

Robert Tripp Jackson, PCPB member and past president of the Point Loma Association, will remember Ross as a tireless community advocate.

“Jarvis was an outspoken community leader for almost 20 years,” said Tripp Jackson. “He was very mindful of over-development, and had true concern for his community ... one of the few that took his time to address the City Council during public comment. If we only had 10 Jarvis Ross’s energy and dedication, it would be a tremendous impact. What I admired the most, though it was obvious, Jarvis was slowing down, he never stopped representing the Peninsula.”

Current PCPB board member Korla Eaquinta noted Jarvis served on numerous planning group committees including long-range planning and project review.

“I have been involved over six years and Jarvis was always present during those years,” said Eaquinta. “I appreciated noting Ross was a regular attendee at City Council meetings, which he would report on to the board at PCPB meetings.

Of Ross, Eaquinta said, “He was a community advocate, an intelligent, articulate, dedicated, committed volunteer and a joy to work with. Jarvis wanted Coastal Commissioners to be elected rather than appointed. Also, when discussing density and development, he would always ask, ‘Where are they going to get the water?’

And Gill, playing defense, contributed four tackles, two tackles for loss and had a sack.

For the game, the Pointers rolled up 480 yards in total offense including 229 passing and 251 on the ground. They converted each of their seven third-down opportunities and had no turnovers. Despite only scoring 29 points, the Centurions totaled 463 yards in offense. 425 of it by quarterback Gunnar Gray, once a Point Loma resident who transferred to UC. The Pointer defense held the hosts to only 38 yards on the ground.

Game highlights included a 54-yard pass from Peres to Jaylon Brown, a 36-yard touchdown toss from Peres to White, a 38-yard interception return by Green and an 18-yard touchdown run by rarely used senior Eric Valdez that ignited a celebration by teammates on the sidelines.

“The kids worked really, really hard to come out and win this game as well as we did in all three phases,” said Pointer head coach Mike Hastings after the game. “Offense, defense and special teams all did their part. But more than that, it was a really dominant performance and these kids really deserved it. We know what lies ahead of us, but this was a fun night.”

The Point Loma’s Pointers put up 61 points against University City in a game that was played with a running clock used when one team leads by 35 or more points in the second half.

Playing on the road against the Centurions (0-2 in Eastern League, 1-7 overall) the Pointers scored nine touchdowns in less than the regulation 48 minutes of prefootball games, winning by a score of 61-29.

In a game of big numbers, several contributions by Pointer players stood out.

Quarterback Jason Peres completed 73% of his passes for 159 yards, four touchdowns, and no interceptions.

Wide Receiver Tristan Shafer was one of Peres’s targets, catching four balls for 76 yards (19.0 average) and two touchdown catches of 14 and 19 yards.

Running back/defensive back Kaden Gill carried the ball 11 times for 97 yards, a 5.7 yards per carry average, and scored two touchdowns.

Defensively, Landon Green had 1.5 tackles, one tackle for loss and intercepted two Centurion passes.

Makel White had four tackles and an interception.

Pointers score 61 against UC before Madison loss

MADISON, POINTERS 10

The Pointers grabbed a 10-7 lead on the Warhawks in the second quarter of their Oct. 18 game when Gill took a first-down handoff and ran over left guard on a four-yard touchdown play.

But Madison came back to score four more times before tackling on a safety for the final score. Two lost fumbles and two interceptions thrown by the Pointers contributed to the Warhawk points.

Still, the Pointers totaled 252 yards in offense, 193 of that on the ground.

The loss left Point Loma with a 5-5 overall record, 0-2 in Western League play.

The Pointers conclude the regular season with league games against two CIF division champions from last season.

Tonight (Oct. 25) they welcome Lincoln (5-3 overall, 0-2 in league) to Pete Ross Stadium for their game with kickoff set for 6:30.

They finish Nov. 1 with a game against St. Augustine (6-2 overall, 1-1 in league) to be played at Mesa College. Kickoff at 7 p.m.

Playoff pairings for this season will be announced Nov. 2. The most recent rankings available show the Pointers as the ninth seed of 16 Div. II teams. The top 12 earn playoff berths.
Come and see our VIEW of personalized care.

We've recently added a new front deck and have remodeled the back patio to allow our residents to enjoy the beautiful views of Point Loma. If you would like to come out and enjoy the view with us, please give us a call to schedule a tour!
