Brown pelicans
fool the coastal skies

By MIKE McCARTHY | THE BEACON

Visitors to the San Diego coast line have been treated to an ongoing show starring the brown pelican. The usual sight of two or so flocks of pelicans soaring over places like Sunset Cliffs in Point Loma has recently grown to two or so dozen seabirds at one time.

Experts in this field appear to have mixed opinions for the reasons behind the large numbers of pelicans that have been appearing for several months.

“There seems to be no real scientific explanation for this phenomenon,” said Andrew Hughan, public information officer for the California Department of Fish and Game in Sacramento. “At this time, there is no data to support the increased population of brown pelicans in the San Diego region.”

Climate changes, the weather and water temperatures are affecting a vast variety of species, including pelicans.

Updrafts — created by the wind reflecting off ocean cliffs — provide the ideal conditions for this seabird to glide effortlessly over the water. The California brown pelican can be found from northern Mexico up to the Oregon border. At one time, it was considered an endangered species because of their declining population.

In 2009, the pelican was removed from the endangered list after their numbers recovered. It was discovered that use of pesticides like DDT was taking its toll on the pelican population, as well as several other seabirds feeding off of the ocean coast. Farmers in places like Imperial Valley were using pesticides that would eventually filter into the Pacific Ocean’s food chain.

The result was that pelican egg shells became thinner and were being crushed by the weight of the large bird. Conservation efforts eventually eliminated the pollutants, and the pelican population slowly grew. Past oil spills also added to the demise of seabirds. The environmental movement was energized by the publicity from the Santa Barbara Union Oil spill in 1969. The federal Migratory Bird Treaty Act of 1918 was the first legislation to protect seabirds. The Endangered Species Act of 1966 permitted individual states to adopt regulations that would give greater protection to migratory birds.

Spokespersons from agencies like the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Department said they are aware of the situation with the brown pelican near San Diego. Expert opinions about the re-emergence of the bird’s numbers varies.

Most experts agree that pelicans are just simply following the food supply. Some say a heavy concentration of pelicans at local beaches makes it appear that their numbers are rapidly increasing.

“Just a one-degree difference in the water temperature makes a big impact on all life in the ocean,” Hughan said. “It’s just good that the pelicans are doing well.”

Ocean Beach Gateway Project still underway

A sign from District 2 Councilmember Kevin Faulconer sits attached to a construction fence at the site of the new Ocean Beach Gateway Project. The saga of the project, which began construction last October, continues for residents. Funds for the project have partially come through, but complications with various materials and confusion over where the remaining funds will come from have delayed completion.

They don’t shed, cough up hairballs, or drink out of the toilet. And when they relieve themselves, it makes dandy fertilizer.

In fact, if there were such a thing as a green pet movement, backyard chickens could become its poster animal. Owners say they rear their pets naturally, provide a family with wholesome, stick-to-your-ribs protein — in the form of a near-daily egg — and promote good, old-fashioned self-reliance.

And they’re even cute. "I could watch them scratch around and wiggle their butts for hours," said Rachel Hiner, who owns three chickens at her North-gansett Avenue residence in Ocean Beach.

It may surprise some to know that, as long as you keep your coop at least 50 feet from any residential structure, the law in San Diego lets you have up to 25 of the critters. But in many households — especially in OB, where lot sizes are charmingly small — 50 feet may as well be 50 light years.

A movement is underway to reduce the distance for a coop with fewer than 10 — no roosters — to 20 feet from the nearest neighbor’s house, and no distance buffer to the owner’s house. Hiner pitched the idea to the Ocean Beach Planning Board, which passed it at its monthly July 7 meeting.

The board declined to take a position, preferring to let the information incubate until a later meeting. But board members said they heard nothing that would cause them to give the proposal the bird.

Robert Edwin Klees was born to William and Ruth Klees on Feb. 21, 1927 in Brooklyn, N.Y. He passed peacefully on June 16, 2011 at 84 years of age.

He was a one-of-a-kind, a class act and a true gentleman.

Bob’s childhood years were spent in several locations in New York and Virginia. He enlisted in the Navy on Jan. 30, 1945, graduating high school early to join in the war effort. He proudly served as a pharmacist mate 3rd class, having taken his advanced training in San Diego, what is now the San Diego Automotive Museum building in Balboa Park.

He was honorably discharged in 1946. He remained a proud Navy supporter his entire life and was a member of the Navy League since 1960. Bob was a true patriot who never failed to tear up when the United States flag marched by.

He entered Duke University in 1948 and soon met Lynn Weith. He graduated as soon as possible so he could wed her love, which occurred on Feb. 24, 1951 in West Caldwell, N.J. at Lynn’s family home. They celebrated their 60th anniversary this year.

His first post-college employment was with Union Carbide in New York City, where he learned the marketing and sales techniques that came so naturally to him. He and Lynn settled in Darten, Conn., and welcomed the births of their first two children, Douglas and Barbara.

Opportunity called when he accepted a position with Beckman Instruments in La Habra. The family resettled in Fullerton and welcomed the birth of daughter Beth in their family home. They celebrated their 60th anniversary this year.

After seven years at Beckman, Bob helped to create a new company, International Biophysics Corp., which was later acquired by the Johnson & Johnson Corp. He then entered graduate school at UC Riverside to pursue an MBA degree. During that time, another opportunity arrived when he was hired by TwentyFirst Century Fox as vice president of marketing for the film-processing division Color By Deluxe. While the movie industry was a big change from biomedical instrumentation, Bob had the experience and people skills to make the transition seamlessly. He retired from Fox in 1983 with many unique experiences and memories.

After moving to San Diego, Bob and Lynn traveled the globe for several years, with their most memorable time being spent in St. Croix, France, Botswana and South Africa. Great memories were made at the Martine’s Memorial Club in San Francisco.

Volunteer work became Bob’s next career, sharing his compassion and positive nature with seniors in the community as a volunteer with San Diego Police Department’s Retired Senior Volunteer Patrol. He earned the rank of lieutenant in his 13 years of service to his community. Bob also served as a docent at the San Diego Air and Space Museum, giving enthusiastic and engaging tours to all age groups, while sharing his love of aviation. He proudly served as “plane captain” of the Spirit of St. Louis replica aircraft that greets visitors in the museum lobby.

He was also proud to be a member of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. There are not words that can capture the essence of the gentleman known as “sweet old Bob.” He loved reading the New York Times in the morning while listening to classical music, and it was jazz he enjoyed while sipping a tulip in the evening.

Bob was a nature lover, bird watcher, rambler of the Arizona desert and a World War II history buff. Duke basketball gave him great joy and he built his schedule around “March Madness” every year. Bob is survived by his wife, Lynn; son Douglas (Debra) of Hollbrook, Ariz.; daughter Betsy (Steve) of Sunnyvale; grandchildren David, Athkinson and Thomas. He was predeceased by daughter Barbara and grandson Dustin. A memorial service will be held on Fri., July 15, 2011 at 2 p.m. at Miramar National Cemetery, 5795 Nobel Drive, San Diego, 92122. Bob will always be remembered for his sense of humor, thoughtfulness, generosity and eternal optimism. To his husband, father, grandfather and friend, we love you and bid you farewell.

Ebb and flow of San Diego’s sportfishing industry

Recreational fishing remains strong in Point Loma

BY JOHNNY MCDONALD | THE BEACON

River since Howard Minor and Ralph Miller Sr. converted a water taxi into a fishing boat, the H&M Sportfishing Co. became the model for all West Coast docks and landings.

From a Broadway pier in 1935, the two men — plus partners Tony and Bill Howe — founded the sportfishing company. They found that the ocean’s vast resources of sea life could be converted into a robust business.

On April 6, 1935, Mascot II made its maiden voyage to the Coronado Islands with 35 anglers who bagged 116 yellowtail. It would be the start of a great relationship.

The San Diego Sport Fisherman’s Association was formed in February 1936 to define fair practices in the industry. Minor played a key role in its development.

H&M’s docks, now in Point Loma, provide for 30 privately-owned vessels in roles ranging from half-day excursions to the kelp beds to journeys reaching the tip of Baja California.

Deep-sea fishing is enjoyed by thousands of fishers who come from great distances to enjoy days on the water and catch species that might produce yellowtail, bluefin, albacore or an occasional white sea bass. The shorter trips produce calico bass, rockfish, scallop and barracuda.

Now, there’s a little competition from the Point Loma Sportfishing’s landing next door, which sports 19 boats. As one spokesman for Point Loma Sportfishing put it: “It’s just like Target and Walmart.”

Thanks to warmer summer waters this year, catch reports are encouraging, according to Patrina Rutkaufkaf of H&M.

“All species and bluefin are being caught on our full-day boats,” Rutkaufkaf said. “The water temperature has been in the 59- to 62-degree range. The 30 boats we have at our docks are privately owned and operated. They’re half- and full-day charters.

“There are a tremendous amount of regulars for the half-day boats,” she said. “Some come several times a week to fish the Point Loma kelp beds or off Imperial Beach. Father’s Day was tremendous business and the Fourth of July was reasonable.”

Last year, 130 dogs found new homes at the festival, the largest of its kind in Southern California. Visitors will find a variety of activities, plus information on topics concerning pet care, health, training and well-being.

Free to the public and to county rescue groups and shelters, the festival brings together breed-specific organizations with other professionals, including educators, veterinarians, vendors and entertainers for the event that lasts from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Also offered is the free “Ask a Vet Professional” booth, at which guests can have all their pressing pet queries addressed.

Stand Down San Diego lends hands to vets

Volunteers from Sharp Healthcare sort through donated clothing to be distributed to homeless veterans during “Stand Down San Diego” on Pacific Highway, July 15-17.

Veterans Village of San Diego (VVD) is still accepting clothing donations to be distributed to disadvantaged and homeless veterans during the 2011 “Stand Down San Diego,” scheduled to take place at the VVSD facility from July 15-17. Donations can be dropped off at the VVSD site, located at 4141 Pacific Highway, through the weekend of the “Stand Down.” This is the flagship event for VVSD, providing much-needed support for San Diego’s homeless veterans population.

Organizers said the event started 23 years ago and the idea has spread to more than 200 locations across the country. Last year, the San Diego version of “Stand Down” attracted nearly 1,000 homeless vets, women and children and provided a variety of services like eye exams, oral surgery, Veterans Administration assistance, employment help, legal services, clothing and about 11,000 meals. OB Gateway project, funds still in limbo

Sterling, for a more attractive and frequented public area in Ocean Beach, the City of San Diego proposed and started a renovation project partially supported by local families and businesses. Tiles were offered to be purchased and engraved with the organizations’ names embedded in the new pathway.

Two work phases were planned to finish the project to secure a safe entry to the park from the street intersection.

Now, after several months of ongoing construction noise, dirt and debris, residents are looking at an unfinished site and 13 feet of permanent walls blocking their windows. So far, an approximate 1-foot stone wall has been built, surrounded by a new walkway decorated with tiles, several light fixtures, a drinking fountain and numerous palm trees replacing the old shrubbery lining the sides and center divider of Sunset Cliffs Boulevard.

A sign by councilmember Kevin Faulconer thanking the public for the new OB Gateway was installed on construction fencing, blocking access to Robb Field and leaving visitors only two entrances to the park: the bike path along the channel or the main park entrance on W Point Loma Boulevard.

In response to the concerns as to why the project has been stalled, Faulconer representative Michael Patton said there had been complications with the tiles that were purchased through the Ocean Beach Construction Development Corporation (OBCDC), who is in charge of the project.

The tile must be constructed of a material that can withstand the procedure of engraving as well as being coarse enough to match the stone wall, Patton said. He added that the initial tile choice by OBCDC failed to meet these requirements but said this problem should be resolved within three to four weeks, since adequate funds are available to conclude Phase I (wall and tiles).

The entire project (to be completed in two phases) runs on a fixed price contract with a construction amount of $415,017.

Patton said he believed $219,000 could still be needed to start and complete Phase II (which include the connection of all four pathways, landscape installation and maintenance).

Funds awarded to OBCDC:

According to www.obcdc.org, the following donations have been made toward the OB Gateway Project:

• $100,000 donated by the Henne family in 2006
• $100,000 from District 2 Commercial Development Block Grants (CDBG) in 2007
• $175,000 from the County of San Diego’s general fund
• $50,000 from the City of San Diego in 2008
• $100,000 from the City of San Diego in 2010 (also from CDBG)
• $20,000 as a Neighborhood Investment Grant and $241,000 from the City of San Diego out of Proposition 40 funds in 2010

TOTAL: $654,017
Fred Thompson knows that good things often come in small packages. An avid ukulele player and co-producer of this year’s San Diego Ukulele Festival, he is well aware of the power of this strange little instrument.

“I have been playing the ukulele since 1958. I play it everyday because you can’t play a sad song on it,” said the 77-year-old. “I know so many people that consider themselves depressed and take medication to help them cope. I say, ‘Put those pills down!’ and start to play them a song on my ukulele. And you know what? They smile. Then they ask me if anyone can play. So I give them the ukulele and begin to teach them a few songs. Within minutes they are playing their first musical instrument in their lives and saying ‘This is the most fun I’ve had in years!’

Thompson will get plenty of chances to prove that claim at the festival, being held at NYC Liberty Station July 14-16. This weekend’s headliners are world-renowned Jake Shimabukuro and James Hill, the Eric Clapton and world-renowned Jake Shimabukuro of course, Fred Thompson and the Ukulele Orchestra of Southern California.

Fred Thompson shows off his ukulele. He will perform this weekend at the San Diego Ukulele Festival at Liberty Station.

Not sure what to do this weekend? Come on down to the Ukulele Festival at NYC Liberty Station because, if you have never seen live ukulele, I promise you’ll feel like it’s Christmas in July. For additional information, visit www.sandiego-ukulefestival.com or email Fred at ukulelefred@gmail.com

“The truth of the matter is that every studio doesn’t come every year,” Glanzel said. “Regardless, there’s still going to be a tremendous amount of very cool programming on the television and film side, so I don’t think fans will be disappointed.”

Glanzelle first attended Comic-Con in 1978, then held at the 85 Corvette Hotel, with a total of 5,000 guests. He’s pleasantly surprised by the event’s growth.

“Many of the people that work on the convention even today have worked on it for many, many years,” Glanzel said. “I think we’ve a little shocked sometimes when we realize how big it is. For four days out of the year, the center of the comic’s universe really is San Diego. It’s cool to see that and it’s cool to walk around and see people that you read about or whose work you read,” he said. “It’s a lot of fun.”

He said the event has an impact on future generations. One never knows, he said. One of those kids wandering the aisles in a superhero costume today could be the next superstar director, writer or actor.

“One of the things that we found interesting is that a lot of the people who are now movers and shakers in a variety of different — publishing or movies or whatever — attended Comic-Con when they were younger,” Glanzel said. “I think that says a lot, not just about Comic-Con but also about the fact that all the years, we were right. Comics are cool and they’re a great form of entertainment. The rest of the world is jumping in on that now.”
“a great addition to my tomatoes,” said Landry Watson, vice president of the Board. “You can create healthy food right in your own backyard.”

The 50-yard requirement comes from an ordinance passed during the 1950s, a time when backyard chickens may have seemed backward in a rapidly modernizing country, Hiner said. But today, urban agriculture is a growing movement, and the Internet is abuzz with ideas on custom coops, replacing lawns with vegetables, and the like.

And with such small groups of hens, concerns like odor, avian flu, water quality and noise aren’t issues, she said.

“My chickens make a lot less noise than the OB parrots.” Hiner said, a reference to an infamous group of feral birds known for their redundant morning squawks.

As for the manure, it goes in the compost pile. “It’s the best recycling I know,” said Hiner, who uses the fertilizer to grow beets, squash, tomatoes and her other vegetables.

There are concerns. Chickens are notoriously incompatible with dogs. The birds will also turn to tender vegetables if they run out of bugs and feed. Hiner’s birds even devoured a small banana tree once, she said.

Members of the audience at the meeting seemed intrigued.

“I’m allergic to cats and dogs, and I think they’d be a great pet,” said Laura Hershey of Ocean Beach.

There are concerns. Chickens are notorious for their avian flu, water quality and odor. There have been outbreaks of the disease around the world, and they are highly contagious to both poultry and humans. However, backyard chicken coops can be designed and managed in ways that minimize these concerns. The key is to keep chickens and dogs separate, provide quality feed and water, and remove manure regularly.

The Briggs Street Comfort Station, as the project is officially known, has been put out to bid for the third time, and the deadline for submission is July 15.

“I don’t know what’s going to happen if they don’t select a contractor this time around,” Patton said, noting that every bid has been rejected since the project was first advertised late last year. The San Diego Association of Governments is talking about smart growth, and it’s causing board members to see dollar signs.

The OBPB parrots,” Hiner said, a reference to an infamous group of feral birds known for their redundant morning squawks.

As for the manure, it goes in the compost pile. “It’s the best recycling I know,” said Hiner, who uses the fertilizer to grow beets, squash, tomatoes and her other vegetables.

There are concerns. Chickens are notorious for their avian flu, water quality and odor. There have been outbreaks of the disease around the world, and they are highly contagious to both poultry and humans. However, backyard chicken coops can be designed and managed in ways that minimize these concerns. The key is to keep chickens and dogs separate, provide quality feed and water, and remove manure regularly.

The San Diego Association of Governments is talking about smart growth, and it’s causing board members to see dollar signs. To make a better pitch for potential grants, the OBPB has formed an ad hoc committee to reach out to other local nonprofit groups. The meeting will probably be held July 20 at the Ocean Beach Recreation Center, 4726 Santa Monica Ave. More information may be available at oceanbeachpb.com.

The Harp voted Best Irish Bar and Best Fish ‘n’ Chips offers a warm welcome with friendly staff serving up great drinks and conversation. Decorated with autographed pictures of Irish sports stars, this is a great spot to watch sports on the plentiful flat screens. It’s renowned for its atmosphere especially during all the major soccer tournaments with patrons cheering on their teams.

Why not grab a seat at the open windows and enjoy an afternoon of people watching while eating some fine comfort food, including full Irish Breakfast, Shepherd’s Pie, Fish ‘n’ Chips, Irish Stew, etc., with a pint of the black stuff. These dishes are all made in house at The Harp, which makes a visit worth it on its own. Monday night is Wing Night and at 25c @ Wing, you won’t find a better bargain in town! Being Irish you’d expect great music and this is the place to dance, & bartender (Jill)!

Also a favorite for live music, place to watch local bands and get your jig on the dance floor!

Summertime is always special in San Diego. The warm evenings lend themselves to all manner of outdoor activities, but it’s hard to beat taking in a musical performance in a park. Area residents will have such a chance each Friday evening from July 15 to Aug. 12, when the Point Loma Association hosts the 11th annual Summer Concert Series at Point Loma Park.

For this year’s entertainment, organizers have rounded up an impressive set of crowd pleasers, including Beatles tribute band Help (July 15), Johnny Cash re-creators Cash’d Out (July 22), 1950s to 1980s dance band The Mar Del’s (July 29), Top-40 favorites The Mighty Untouchables (Aug. 5) and top classic-rock combo, Rockola (Aug. 12). The headliner each night will go on at 6:30 p.m. with a warm-up set on the Kids Community Stage beginning at 5:30 p.m. The Recreational Music Center School Band will kick off the whole series on July 15.

Rockola is by far the most popular band to play at this event. This will be the sixth time the band closes the series.

“It’s one of my favorite events to play,” said guitarist Mark DeCerbo. “Anytime you can play a big event like this in the fresh air, with such a huge crowd, it’s going to a good thing. But the crowds here are so responsive it’s extra fun.”

He said it can be tougher to play rock ’n’ roll in the daytime, but adds that there is a tradeoff.

“It’s really great to see families out having a good time and enjoying music. That’s something that could never happen in a club,” DeCerbo said Rockola adapts its set list for shows like this.

“We go for the bigger crowd pleasers,” he said. “Occasionally, we invite kids up to join us for a song, so we’ll play something that’s really well known like ‘Proud Mary,’ or a song that’s become a hit again via a movie, like the Monkees’ song ‘I’m a Believer.’ The kids all know that because of ‘Shrek.’”

CONCERTS

Despite the passage of time, he sees no dropoff in the interest in classic rock.

“To the contrary,” he said, “Rockola has been playing now for 25 years. I really thought there might a shift in musical tastes, but that hasn’t been the case at all. We get crowds of people that are all ages. And the young ones seem to know the words to every song.”

He points to the Beatles’ material as being particular crowd pleasers.

“You’ll never go wrong putting ‘Twist and Shout’ or ‘I Saw Her Standing There’ in a set list,” he said.

Mighty Unstoppable guitarist Mark Fulton agrees that it’s important to include music for people of all ages.

“We cover a lot of ground from salua to rock,” he said. For the adults, we do things like a 25-minute Motown medley. But for the kids, we can play things like Bruno Mars, Katy Perry and L’ee (even). They seem to know all those songs.”

Fulton said the biggest change is in the tempo set for an outdoor gig.

“Not too many slow songs,” he said. “We might do ‘My Girl’ or something like that, but we like to keep things moving.”

Fulton cited another reason why he enjoys these park events.

“We like being able to play for families,” he said. “In fact, we bring our own families to enjoy the music as well.”

To help ease traffic around the park, free parking and free shuttle service will be provided at All Souls’ Episcopal Church, 1475 Catalina Blvd, two blocks north of the park. To access the All Souls’ parking lot, follow signs from Catalina Boulevard to Chatsworth Boulevard then turn left into the parking lot. The shuttle will operate from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Marathon Over the Line (OTL) competition.

Common Care Giving Misconceptions

Caring for a parent or spouse is an emotional subject which is likely the reason so many myths surround it. This article is designed to dispel some of these myths. It's a must-read for anyone currently involved in care giving including those who are considering hiring or perhaps even becoming a caregiver.

- Adult Children No Longer Provide Care for Aging Parents at Home
  - While stories of adult children abandoning their aging parents make for interesting reading, this is just not true. What is true is that families live further apart from one another than ever before and that situation sometimes presents caregiving challenges.
  - Advances in communication make it easy for adult children and aging parents to stay in regular contact. Many children also care for their parents for the first time.

- Most Have a Plan in Place Before the Need Arises
  - Not true. If you don’t yet have a caregiving plan, you’re definitely not alone. Most adult children do not tackle this issue until they are forced, meaning it doesn’t usually happen until a parent becomes ill.
  - Not many people get to do that. It was an ideal exit for Gelenter, who said. "I have a lot of the symptoms, but I felt good."
All Aboard for Old Town – Next Stop Stagecoach Days

OTL is a modified form of beach baseball/softball. Games last three or four innings and the primary objective is to hit the ball “over the line” about 55 feet in front of the batter. This year’s double-elimination tournament features more than 1,300 three-person teams competing for trophies.

“Typically, if they’re a seeded team, they are going to end up playing five or six games,” said Martin. “If they’re in the loser’s bracket, they need to beat the team in the winner’s bracket twice.”

Although OTL is noted for fiercely competitive contests, as much interest is paid to the surrounding debauchery and off-color team names.

“Team names are traditionally created and good-natured, but can sometimes be quite colorful, often pertaining to current events,” said Martin.

That may be why the event has not often drawn national television coverage.

Reserved parking is still available for both weekends, although supply is limited.

beyond 70 years of age. But don’t be mistaken about the frollicking atmosphere. It takes skill to reach the finals.

“Those who have won in many [age] divisions before continue to come back,” said Ed Martin, public relations director for the tournament. “They may not always play on the same team every year.”

Martin said several have entered who are consistent trophy winners. There’s Tom Whalen and Merle Cummings, who have won 14 times, and Camille Magina, a 12-time victor in the women’s divisions.

Others who have won several OTL tournaments and are entered this year are Bob Mendoza, Scott Bello, Lisa McGowan, Linda Detro and Stefanie Olow.

“The unique California” cultural elements will be presented again this Saturday.

August 20 — TwainFest – The festival marks 101 years of Mark Twain’s passing and celebrates the American author as well as some of his peers. Excerpts from famous works will be read aloud by costumed San Diego actors at a variety of park venues throughout the day.
