A judge on Feb. 25 scheduled an April 16 preliminary hearing for a Point Loma woman who is accused of attacking an acquaintance with a glass bong.

Layla Maria Lugo, 25, appeared before San Diego Superior Court Judge Laura Halgen, who set new court dates for Lugo following her Feb. 8 arrest.

Lugo is accused of inflicting great bodily injuries in a felony assault upon a 30-year-old man at a residence near Liberty Station and two blocks from Rosecrans Street on Feb. 8, according to court records.

The man was taken to a hospital, but police said his injuries were not life threatening. Lugo fled after the 2:20 p.m. incident, but police arrested her a few blocks away.

She pleaded not guilty to the two assault charges on Feb. 13. She remains in the Las Colonias Women’s Detention Facility on $30,000 bail.

PROFILE: Andrea Schlageter brings new ideas and energy to Ocean Beach

A born again Peninsulan, Andrea Schlageter has returned to Boston University to become a civic activist, which seems apropos as more women than ever are becoming politically involved.

An almost-native Point Loman she lived in north PB with her family until kindergarten, Andrea is a product of local schools – Dana Elementary, High Tech Middle and Point Loma High School. She’s returned with a degree in political science and international relations.

Her ultimate career goal is to someday work for the U.S. State Department, perhaps even as an overseas diplomat.

But in the meantime, she’s back in town for the foreseeable future, doing some contract work and volunteering in community groups.

Now chair of the Ocean Beach Planning Board, Schlageter is excited to focus on public service while developing a “closer relationship between Point Loma and Ocean Beach communities.”

How’s her stint as board chair been so far?

“I’m learning a lot about things close to my heart and other issues, and it’s helped my critical-thinking skills,” she answered. “I’ve been enjoying listening to everyone’s point of view, whether or not I agree with them. I like trying to help people find solutions. I’ve always been solution-oriented.

Schlageter points to a local mentor she’s been inspired by.

“Dave Martin has been instrumental in uniting the Point to become more one voice lobbying the city for things we need, as opposed to multiple voices,” she said.

Schlageter’s also volunteered with the nonprofit Point Loma Association. She agreed recently to chair the PLAs new Public Safety Committee.

“I’ve been concerned about the rise in transient crime in OB and the seeming crime spree the past few months,” she said. “The short-term solution is more foot cops and just more vigilance. But I’d like to help the community find longer-term solutions.”

The new OB Planning Board chair talked about two other hot-button issues – parking and Airbnb – that she’d like to see more fully addressed.

“They go hand-in-hand in our heavily impacted neighborhoods near the beach,” she said, noting parking is so tight in the Peninsula, residents are vying with tourists for increasingly limited parking space.

Schlageter opposes relaxing parking requirements for developments in transit-oriented zones.

“That’s a giveaway to developers to take more of our land and our amenities away, and will not alleviate our use of cars and need for parking,” she said. “I think that will be more impactful on our community, and I hate to see that happening.”

Concerning Airbnb and short-term vacation rentals, Schlageter said: “They’re taking our culture away from us and selling it to the tourists. I would like to see the codes enforced, and no short-term rentals in residential or multi-family zones. That is our housing for us. Short-term rentals should be in commercial and mixed-use districts.

“I think the solutions are out there,” Schlageter said about the community’s pressing social and demographic issues. But solving those issues “will take some really creative thinking.”
Legendary headshop The Black boasts counterculture reputation

OWNER OF THE BLACK

"People are still coming in all the time. I'm still getting people, even San Diegans, who've never been here before, which is strange."

"It’s a one-stop shop good for Christmas shopping for whatever the occasion," Dornbusch said, adding The Black is great for gifts and a smoke shop," Dornbusch said, adding The Black is great shopping for whatever the occasion.

"It’s a one-stop shop good for Christmas, birthdays, or just buying gifts," he added. Named originally for being financially "in the black," the iconic OB business at 5017 Newport Ave., is divided into departments selling jewelry, clothing, candles, incense, housewares, music, cards and books.

Of his merchandise Dornbusch noted, "We have a lot of jewelry, carry some silver chains, and lots of silver rings with gemstones. We carry stainless-steel rings and jewelry, some bracelets and lots of earrings, though nothing too expensive. We have a good selection of earrings with gemstones."

The Black is actually two stores in one. The rear portion, notable for its T-shirts, books, posters, tapestries and other cultural memorabilia, is leased-out space by a separate business named Ocean Beach Books and Music. "The main body of the shop encompasses bedspreads, candles, incense burners, some lamps and black lights," said Dornbusch, adding he also carries cigars and every imaginable pipe fashioned from any material that can be smoked through.

Owner Kurt Dornbusch is proud of the distinction. He noted The Black’s ’60s counterculture reputation not only continues to put it — and OB — on the map, but remains a true calling card.

"People coming to San Diego get off the plane and tell their cab driver, 'Take me to The Black straight away,'" said Dornbusch.

The Black’s owner started working there at age 19. He became assistant manager two weeks later.

"I started working for the (original) owner right out of high school when my brother was the manager in 1975," he said. "I became the owner in January 1981."

The spacious, 3,500-square-foot store is more than just a headshop. "We’re also a department store, a gift shop and a smoke shop," Dornbusch said, adding The Black is great shopping for whatever the occasion.

San Diego Recreational Cannabis celebrates 1-year anniversary

San Diego Recreational Cannabis, serving all of San Diego, just celebrated its one-year anniversary. Located at 1299 Camino Del Rio South in Mission Valley, the marijuana dispensary prides itself on being socially conscious and responsible.

“We don’t sell to anyone under age 21,” noted co-owner/CEO Tara St. Peter, who, along with husband Sean, owns the dispensary. “We cover the whole city of San Diego, and do deliveries outside of the city as well.”

Sean is a Navy veteran and a land surveyor. Tara’s background is in accounting. The St. Peters were previously in the cannabis business in Washington state.

“In 2008 Sean decided to get into the medical marijuana industry when it was starting out and we had a store,” said Tara. “I didn’t come into the industry with him until 2010.”

Tara noted that cannabis industry regulation “is good,” acknowledging that, previously, “there were no regulations.” She pointed out regulations are now “black and white.”

SDRC’s 5,000-square-foot building “is in an ideal location, right in the heart of Mission Valley in a building that was a nightclub before,” said Tara, adding their business has somewhat of “an older demographic.”

Of their inventory, Tara said, “We have hundreds of different products from vapes and flowers to edibles, topicals and tinctures – pretty much whatever you desire for cannabis, with the right price that fits your budget.”

Tara talked about SDRC’s amenities. “We have 10 check-out stations and superior customer service,” she said. “All our products have really fair pricing for the average consumer who is price-conscious and wants really good deals.”

SDRC wants knowledgeable, as well as satisfied, customers. “We really want to educate people,” Tara said, adding their clientele includes “every age, every demographic, tourists, couples, families, those who’ve never tried it and are curious about it. It’s kind of almost an outing and an adventure for them.”

St. Peter said it’s an exciting – though stressful – time in the fledgling San Diego marijuana business. “We’re talking about a brand-new industry and there are a lot of new rules with it,” Tara said. “In order to be compliant in the recreational market everything, from seed to sale, is now tracked and traced. Recreational cannabis is now tested for pesticides and microbials. Everything is regulated for testing, compliance and for being tamper-proof, so consumers know they’re getting a safe product.”

Blue Water Seafood Market & Grill opens in Ocean Beach

BY DAVE SCHWAB | THE BEACON

Ocean Beach now has fast-casual seafood. Blue Water Seafood Market & Grill, a family operated business owned by brothers Judd and Matt Braun, had a soft opening Feb. 7 in Sunset Plaza.

The new market-restaurant, which is expanding from its current Mission Hills location, is below Wonderland and next to OB Surf Lodge. Blue Water OB is a collaboration between the Braun brothers and Social Syndicate, a San Diego-based restaurant development group founded in 2014, which also includes Wonderland Ocean Pub and The Local in Pacific Beach.

It’s a homecoming of sorts for the Braun brothers, both of whom are OB natives living near their new business which opened after a year-long remodel.

“We’re hoping to be a foundation in OB, something the neighborhood can cling to and be proud of, have it be their fish market and their restaurant,” said Judd Braun. “It’s a family place where kids are welcome. This isn’t a chain. Our food is fresh every single day, and we hand cut everything to order.”

Patrons of Blue Water can customize any meal by choosing the fresh fish and marinade, and choice of sandwich, salad, plate or taco. The menu is led by the restaurant’s award-winning “Track Taco,” which features grilled fresh wild Pacific shrimp marinated in chipotle butter, topped with Maui onion and mango slaw. The taco is served on a fresh corn tortilla with melted cheddar white sauce, tomatillo sauce and avocado.

The restaurant’s new space is bigger than its Mission Hills counterpart, having large booths with family-style seating and wood tables with unique custom designs of fish carvings. There’s also an outdoor patio illuminated by white market lights with a stunning ocean view.

Brendan Huffman, of Social Syndicate, said with the addition of Blue Water OB, that Sunset Plaza’s redevelopment is now complete.

“It’s the final puzzle piece,” Huffman said. “You’ve got pretty much everything under one roof now with Wonderland’s ocean views upstairs, brunch-driven OB Surf Lodge downstairs along with a fast-casual fish market. It’s a special day for OB, with Blue Water growing roots and making OB great.”

The Point Loma Optimist Club has supported peninsula communities of Point Loma, Ocean Beach, Loma Portal and the Midway District for over 60 years. In addition to providing annual support to groups that foster musical, athletic, and academic achievement, the club has been a major contributor to the Peninsula YMCA since its inception, The Little League fields below the fire station on Catalina bear the name, “Optimist Field.”

Many local high school seniors are attending colleges and universities, financing part of their educations with Point Loma Optimist scholarships. The club has also made major donations to our local elementary schools including Dewey Elementary’s STEAM program, as well as, Cabrillo Elementary and Silvergate Elementary have received sizable donations from the club as well in recent year.

The Point Loma Optimist Club benefits our community in other ways. Ever wonder who puts out all those flags on Rosecrans? Yup, that’s the Point Loma Optimists. Since July 4, 1964, volunteers of the Point Loma Optimist Club have set out 168 American flags along a two mile section of Rosecrans Street on the Fourth of July.

Yellow cards and injuries to both teams added 15 minutes of extra time to regulation and when a Falcon player scored five minutes later for a 3-2 lead, he ran with several teammates to the Pointer stands, removing his jersey before standing several feet away and shouting obscenities at students.

Fortunately, no Pointer students attempted to jump the low fence and confront the Falcon players. PLHS athletic director Alex Van Heuven and vice principal Kelly Lowry were the only several feet from the Falcon contingent as students recorded the incident on phones. For the first time in school history, a female wrestler from PLHS has earned a spot in the state meet held last weekend in Bakersfield.

Coach Brian Lamb reports Willink is the first Pointer wrestler to qualify for the state meet since the 1990s. She has wrestled every season during her time at PLHS. Willink won one match by pin at state last Saturday before losing her next two in the double-elimination event.

“Point Loma wrestling is very proud of Rana,” said Lamb. “She exudes class, grace, beauty and wicked strength on and off the mat. As a team captain she has been a well-rounded and positive influence.”

MADCAPS mission is to involve mothers and daughters in direct service and support of philanthropic organizations. This show is a celebration of the girls’ hard work and dedication to serving the community. “Our annual benefit show is an opportunity for our members to produce a fun and entertaining show while raising much needed funds for local nonprofits,” said Nancy Kease, MADCAPS president. “It’s a great way to engage our junior members to help make a financial contribution to the nonprofits that they have volunteered with.”

This annual musical extravaganza has become MADCAPS signature fundraising event to provide financial support to dozens of local charities. The underwriting of major production costs, proceeds from ticket and advertising sales, and the donated time and expertise of the girls, their families and friends, make it possible to give to these local San Diego nonprofits.

The organization is comprised of more than 200 mothers and their daughters in seventh to 12th grade who reside in the neighborhoods of Point Loma, Ocean Beach, Mission Hills and Hillcrest. In addition to the more than 8,000 hours of community service volunteered by the girls each year, MADCAPS presents an annual high-energy music and dance benefit show to raise additional funds for these local charities.

MADCAPS has distributed more than $1.16 million to local charities and completed thousands of hours of direct service. Organizations that have benefited from MADCAPS philanthropy include Father Joe’s Villages, YMCA Becky’s House, UCSD Bannister Family House, Rady Children’s Hospital, Autism Tree Project Foundation, Therapeutic Recreation Services, San Diego Humane Society, and Habitat for Humanity.

After winning the National Inter-scholastic College Surf Championships for the past four years, Point Loma Nazarene’s surf team has more than earned the label “tiny but mighty.”

At 3,200 students, PLNU’s enrollment is minuscule compared to the universities it competes against, but when most of those students are surfers, and the school sits above one of the best surf breaks in San Diego, it’s no longer a surprise why Point Loma is ranked the No. 1 best surf school in the country.

“Well, there’s a lot of students on campus, the proportion of students that do surf is probably way higher here than at most other schools,” said Madeline Lomonaco, a senior at Point Loma and four-year member of the school’s surf team. “We’re not only able to hold our own during competitions, but finish in the top three. I never felt like we had a disadvantage.”

All college surf teams compete in the National Scholastic Surfing Association (NSSA), which is the highest amateur competitive surfing association in the United States. The regular college team season is a four-event schedule, leading up to the state championships.

After state, the top eight teams go on to the national championships at Salt Creek in June. Point Loma’s surfers are currently preparing for Seaside Reef’s state championships, which start Friday, March 1.

“The national championships are major. It’s their chance to shine, and if they can win, it shows the entire country how strong they are,” said three-time state champion Brennan Aubol.

The team is currently preparing for the state championships, which start Friday, March 1.

“I’m excited for the state champs because it’s actually at my own local surf spot,” said Encinitas local and Point Loma senior Brennan Aubol, who co-captains the team with Andrew Niemann. “It’ll be really rewarding to do a last hoorah at a place close to home. It’s one of the last events I’ll probably ever do with PLNU so I’m mostly focusing on just enjoying it.”

Point Loma will be competing with some big-name schools such as San Diego State University and San Francisco State University. Lomonaco says that though the team lost a couple star seniors (Jordan Kudla and Timmy Metcal) in the same year competition has shown visible growth, the team isn’t worried.
