La Jolla has some frighteningly fun events in store for Halloween this year, including a haunted fairy adventure at the Birch Aquarium, free kid-friendly fun at the La Jolla Recreation Center and a La Jolla Shores restaurant that goes above and beyond with Halloween decorations for its favorite holiday.

La Jolla-grown filmmaker Yoav Potash, called “Joe” by classmates during his school days, will have a short-yet-sweet homcoming by showcasing his highly acclaimed, award-winning film, “Crime After Crime,” at the Lawrence Family Jewish Community Center on Oct. 27.

Proceeds from the film screening will benefit Project SARAH (Stop Abusive Relationships At Home) — a Jewish Family Service program that provides counseling, case management, therapeutic support groups and advocacy services for victims of domestic violence and other forms of abuse.

“Crime After Crime” is a documentary film that taken an intimate look into the case of Debbie Peagler — a victim of domestic abuse and sex trafficking by her boyfriend — and the efforts of two rookie land-use lawyers who fought for Peagler’s freedom after she was sentenced to 25 years to life in prison for collaboration in her abuser’s murder.

I was blown away by the film,” said Cheryl Bruser, Project SARAH’s outreach coordinator. “Some of the things that stick out to me are the resilience of Debbie. She keeps getting knocked down and dealt terrible cards, starting with the things that stick out to me are the resilience of Debbie. According to California laws, lobsters must be measured underwater and those with carapaces less than 3 1/4 inches must be thrown back. Additionally, no more than seven lobsters can be taken per person per day, divers can only use their hands to take lobsters and all recreationally harvested lobsters must remain whole and intact while at sea. Hughan said opening day of lobster diving season on Oct. 1 went smoothly. “It was a great day — no safety violations, no one got hurt,” he said, although wardens did issue several citations throughout the day for underage lobster catches and exceeding limits.

The season has not gone all that smoothly since then, however. One death already occurred from the aquatic pursuit — that of 35-year-old Jimmy Somphiringa Tanovan on Oct. 9. According to police, Tanovan went into the water alone around 7 p.m. He was found dead in waters south of Children’s Pool in La Jolla — in an area known as “Hospital Point” — around 8:30 p.m.

Tanovan’s death marks the 11th diving fatality in San Diego since 2007. Marine safety lifeguard Lt. John Everhart emphasized the importance of diving safety during the height of the season. “Don’t dive alone,” he said. “You have to think that every diving death that we’ve had where a diver was diving alone could have been prevented. It’s critical to have a buddy.” He also urged divers be aware of their abilities and surroundings both on the surface of the water with currents and swells and below the surface in the kelp forests, reefs of skeletal mummies jealous of seaweed decorations took the restaurant’s crew at least an entire day to set up.

Eddie V’s changes ownership, maintains quality dining

Guy Villavaso and Larry Foles, co-founders of Eddie V’s restaurants, announced an agreement to sell their eight Eddie V’s and three Wildfish restaurants to Darden Restaurants Inc., the world’s largest full-service restaurant company that includes well-known chains like Red Lobster, Olive Garden and Bahama Breeze.

“This is an opportunity we could not pass up,” said Foles. “In a highly competitive industry, we found one of the most successful restaurant companies in the world wanted to grow Eddie V’s and Wildfish restaurants to their fullest potential.” Villavaso and Foles have agreed to close the sale by the end of the year, and both will serve as consultants for the restaurants over the next two years.

In the meantime, Villavaso and Foles will shift their focus solely on the development of four Roaring Fork restaurants in Texas and Arizona, a rugged Old West-style restaurant featuring wood-fired cooking and bold American cuisine, which was not included as part of the sale. “It is really a culmination of a dream since opening our first Eddie V’s in 2000,” said Villavaso. “We have always believed that through a commitment to excellence in our staff and the guest experience, we could create the finest seafood restaurant. Darden agreed and this partnership will take it to the next level.” Villavaso said the quality of the brand, excellence of the employees and dining experience will not change from the transition.

Eddie V’s Prime Seafood is located at 1270 Prospect St. For more information or to make a reservation, call (858) 459-5500 or visit www.eddiev.com.

Eddie V’s is shown while under construction earlier this year. The restaurant has been a successful dining experience in many locations in the Southwest and Southern California, but president and CEO Jim VanDercook said it was his dream to open a restaurant in La Jolla.

Salsal finds a permanent home in the Village

Susie Nguyen, aka “Salsa Susie,” opened the doors to her Ooh La La Dance Academy at a grand opening ceremony on Oct. 9.

The dance academy, which previously held classes in the La Jolla YMCA, finally got its permanent home, a process Nguyen said was years in the making.

“I put everything I have — heart, mind, body, soul, savings, credit and years — into building this 1,500-square-foot, two-studio academy to have a place for preschoolers and adults to experience the joy and passion of dance,” she said. “It changed my life, so I’ve dedicated my life to dance. Needless to say, the studio is my life, so I’ve dedicated my life to dance.”

Nguyen is offering two weeks of free kids classes to children ages 5-14 until the end of October. Ooh La La Dance Academy offers classes for children and adults in a variety of dance disciplines, including salsa, hip hop, ballet, jazz, hula, cha cha, flamenco, show and character. Trio suspected in Craigslist murder of La Jolla High grad bound over for trial

Two teenagers and an adult were ordered Oct. 12 to stand trial for the murder of Garrett Berki, 18, a Mission Beach resident and a 2010 graduate of La Jolla High School.

Berki, who answered a Craigslist ad on May 11 to buy a computer, was instead robbed and shot — allegedly by the three defendants who, according to prosecutors, planned the robbery before the incident in Paradise Hills.

They were also accused of committing the homicide as members or associates of a criminal street gang.

After a two-day preliminary hearing before a packed courtroom, San Diego Superior Court Judge Joan Weber ruled there was enough evidence against Roshon Jay Abrahany, 17, Shaquille Jordan, 17, and Sean doll Lee Jones, 18, to justify a trial.

They face trial as adults.

All three defendants have pleaded not guilty and will return to court Oct. 12 to be sentenced.

Beautification of Coast Boulevard

The vote was 5-2 in favor of designating the historical property in case reconsideration of its historic designation is denied by the judge, according to Bolthouse.

Bolthouse said if the owners were instead robbed and shot — allegedly by the trio could be sentenced to 50 years in prison and $100,000 in fines.

After Berki was robbed in the deal-gone-wrong, he followed his victim in his car to get their license-plate number as they turned into a cul-de-sac, "Troca" said.

Troca identified a shot through the windshield, striking Berki in the chest. Berki died later that night from his injuries.

San Diego police Det. John Brown was called as an expert witness involving gang members and specificity with the trio associated with — or were members of — two gangs.

Defense attorneys disputed his testimony, saying he had an ax to grind.

Abrahany’s lawyer, Kate Coyne, argued there was no testimony that gang signs were flashed or challenges made during the incident.

Garrett Berki was gunned down in a Craigslist transaction gone wrong on May 11 when two teenagers and an adult were charged with his murder for robbery of Berki and his girlfriend.

The trio was ordered to stand trial for the crime, which included shooting at an occupied vehicle, releasing all of which occurred during the incident in Paradise Hills.
heir they’re not your buddy anymore.”

Garcia detailed the night for Lozano, describing the moment when he noticed that Ausdemore was no longer at the surface of the water. Despite doing everything he could to save his friend, Ausdemore experienced a shallow water blackout — common in free-divers. By the time Garcia noticed he was missing in the water, 10 minutes had lapsed and it was too late to save him.

Lozano urged divers to have someone watching and waiting for them at the surface of the water.

“When you black out, you don’t have any control over what Lozano explained, because when that blackout occurs, the muscle used to hold air in relaxes and the blackout only sounds like an exhalation of breath. “There are too many variables. Because of that, blackouts and motor control failures happen, and that is the essence. [For] something so simple as a lobster dive, there’s no real good excuse not to have a safety buddy.”

Lozano said the majority of divers blackouts occur after they have descended 20 feet or more and are 5 feet of the surface, so just because a diver is in shallow water does not mean the dive is safe.

“This is one of those sports where ignorance is not bliss,” he said. “Ignorance can get you killed.”

The injury-depleted Bishop’s School football team succumbed to a rapidly rising Santa Fe Christian High squad 56-13 under the lights at the La Jolla High School Oct. 14.

“I don’t want to make an excuse. Santa Fe played great,” said La Jolla coach Joel Allen. “I don’t think we coached it the best, starting with me. We had missed a couple good teams too.”

The Knights (4-2) entered the matchup against the undefeated Eagles without starting quarterback Joey Moreno, who was at the top of the list of injured players on the roster. But the Bishop’s players and staff refused to use injuries as an excuse for a poor performance by its vaunted program.

“We’ve got to come out here with the guys we have. Everybody’s got to be able to execute and play disciplined,” said sophomore Michael Hinkley, who served as Moreno’s replacement at quarterback. “We’ve got to get the job done. Tonight we did not.”

SFC (6-0), which cracked the coun-voy’s top-10 list in the most recent edition of the Spot Football Magazine, used a relentless running attack and a stifling defense to quickly shut out a 42-0 first-half lead over the Knights.

In particular, Eagles running back Jarrod Watson-Lewis was dominant. The senior scored four touchdowns in all and accounted for 160 of his team’s 413 yards on the ground. Most importantly, the shifty, potent runner was able to come up with key situations time and time again.

“We didn’t tackle him. We missed tackles, missed assignments if and when he’s open, the guy gets it and takes it to the house,” Allen said of Watson-Lewis’ performance.

The Eagles came in gunning for a Bishop’s squad that’s coming off a prestigious state championship last year. The added motivation was apparent in SFC’s will to keep pounding on points throughout the first half.

Sophomore running back Jake Soue ended the Knights’ first half on a positive note with an impressive 51-yard touchdown run. Bishop’s came out strong in the second half with a scoring drive that culminated in a two-yard run by Soue.

One positive note from the game was a chance for Hinkley to get some playing time as quarterback.

The sophomore also serves as the team’s middle linebacker and tight end. He had previously just played four varsity games in key situations time and time again.

“It was great to be in there and get some varsity action,” Hinkley said. “I try to help my team as much as I can and that’s all I can do.”

The Knights travel to Parker High Oct. 22 for a 3 p.m. start then return home to take on rival La Jolla Country Day on Nov. 29.

Notes: After starting out 4-0 fol-loowing 2010’s unbeaten season, the Knights have fallen to 4-2 with consecutive losses.

Senior QB Moreno suffered a deep thigh bruise in a game against Bishop’s Union on Oct. 7. Q Allen said Moreno could be back this weekend depending on how fast his injury heals.

La Jolla Village Merchants Association (LVMA) voted to approve a five-year holiday décor plan, which includes rooftop lights on Girard Avenue from Torrey Pines Road to Prospect Street. The LVMA is also at the tail end of a branding campaign and in the midst of building a new, robust website which will launch in January 2012, said Rosemary Muirrat, LVMA’s executive director.

The Traffic and Transportation (T&T) board asked that modifications to on-street parking zones within the La Jolla footprint be first presented to the T&T, then to the La Jolla Community Planning Association, said T&T representative Rob Hilt.

The LJVMA voted unanimously to support the La Jolla Brew House’s request to the city to permit live entertainment in their establishment.

Salk awarded $4.5 million NIH grant to accelerate brain research

By KENDRA HARTMANN | Villager News

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) awarded the Salk Institute for Biological Studies a $4.5 million grant specifically to establish the Neuroscience Core Center, a new research center that will accelerate brain research and lay the foundation for developing new ways of treating congenital brain defects and neurological diseases.

The five-year grant will support the work of Salk’s neuroscience researchers, who make up more than half of the faculty at the institute.

“We are extremely excited about this center because it will provide unique services of great use to many of the institute’s investigators and will help expand our understanding of a range of neurological disorders,” said Dennis O’Leary, the Vincent J. Coates Professor of Molecular Neurobiology at Salk and Alzheimer’s disease expert.

The imaging core will help scientists study human neurological diseases, including brain development, aging and brain function, and study human diseases like autism, schizophrenia and Alzheimer’s. The imaging core will also increase Salk’s ability to train additional researchers.

The Bigs hit 50 and Kenny Loggins entertains

Most of us recognize that mentoring is very important to children’s development. Most of us enjoyed the benefit of parents who were available to support and encourage them. But what of those kids who aren’t fortunate enough to have two parents who are not only present, but also have the time, ability and inclination to guide their children toward productive and rewarding futures? Fortunately, there’s an organization dedicated to helping such children connect with people who can make a big difference in their lives.

They’ve been around for a while, so you’ve probably heard of them. They’re called Big Brothers Big Sisters (known as the Bigs, in their own shorthand), and the San Diego County branch is headed by Brian Palmer. They connect dedicated mentors of both genders (“bigs”) with the kids that need them most (“littles”).

The organization’s been doing its work for a half-century; celebrating its 50th anniversary with its annual gourmet dinner event, held at the Hyatt Aventine on Oct. 6. It began with a 75-minute reception featuring hosted bars, specialty drinks, hors d’oeuvres and a silent auction. The traditional fresh seafood buffet included a variety of sushi creations and copious quantities of huge U-11 shrimp (euryomorpha as that may sound). Moving to the ballroom for dinner, the guests (about 650) encountered a prophetic flash mob presentation of “Tonight’s Gonna Be a Good Night.”

And it was. NFL Hall-of-Famer Lynn Swann (on the Bigs’ national board for decades) emceed the event and Linda Lang, CEO of Jack in the Box (whose foundation has supported the Bigs to the tune of more than $7 million over the last few years) received the Person of the Year award. Rom and Alexie Fowler posted a Fund-a-Match challenge gift of $100,000, which donors enthusiastically exceeded. The evening netted more than $550,000 (about 90 percent of which will directly support the Bigs’ mentoring programs). Many guests stayed for cigars and brandy on the patio at the evening’s end.

The Hyatt Aventine was the scene of another fundraiser the very next night, when legendary singer-songwriter Kenny Loggins came to perform at the Concert for the Children fundraiser for the Hospital Infantil de las Californias (HIC). Proceeds will help support HIC’s Indigent Care Program, which benefits families on both sides of the U.S.-Mexico border who are unable to pay for their children’s surgical and treatment expenses.

More than 400 guests enjoyed tray-passed hors d’oeuvres, along with chardonnay and claret from the prestigious Francis Ford Coppola winery. The first course, a chilled gazpacho soup, was on the table when they entered the dining room, filet and crab cakes followed. Live auction bidding was especially lively, often purposely exceeding the value of the items offered. A video illustrated HIC’s important work and generous pledges of financial support were made.

The congenial Loggins performed an entertaining show, playing many of his familiar hits as well as songs popularized by others. One of his most famous creations was “This Is It,” with the lines “You think that maybe it’s over; Not if you don’t want it to be.” He told a story of how he visited his father in the hospital, just before a scheduled operation. His dad confided he was prepared to die on the operating table if necessary. Kenny felt it probably wouldn’t be a problem, since pops was only facing hemorrhoid surgery. The song may actually refer to relationships, though some think it may have to do with the upcoming NBA season. Near the end of the evening, Loggins performed an encore of “Footloose.” He said to his audience, “What do you say after that? You say ‘Thank you.’

San Diego Nurse Is Speaker At Care Managers Retreat

Colleen Van Horn from Innovative Healthcare Consultants was among the 40 advanced geriatric care management professionals who attended The National Association of Professional Geriatric Care Managers Advanced Practice Retreat, which took place September 15-18, 2011 in San Diego, CA. Professionals from around the country came together to share best practices from both the clinical and business perspectives. The conference was aimed at geriatric care managers with more than five years of experience and who are instrumental in the day to day management of a geriatric care management practice. The intimate setting allowed those in attendance to perfect and enhance the services they provide to those challenged by issues of aging.

Highlights of the conference included:

- New ideas on how to make hospital transitions positive.
- How to add elements of “quality of life” to each client’s plan.
- How to deal with resistance to care in kind and mindful approaches.
- More information about Innovative Healthcare Consultants can be found at www.innovativehc.com or call us at (760)731-1334

Dance aficionados know La Jolla native John Malashock’s 23-year-old Malashock Dance as one of San Diego’s best modern dance troupes. Malashock Dance is currently in residence at La Jolla Playhouse, presenting the second edition of even more provocative world premiere works in the second edition of “Malashock/Raw,” aptly titled “Malashock/Raw 2.”

Choreographer Malashock, who graduated from La Jolla High School, danced with New York’s renowned Twyla Tharp Dance and after touring for nearly a decade, returned to the San Diego area, determined to go into business in order to provide a more “normal” life for his wife Nina and son Daniel.

“But you know how dance is,” Malashock said. “It called me back.”

Malashock’s new dance, titled “Piece of Saturday Night,” brings an edgy, more overtly sexual energy to the troupe.

Opening tonight (Oct. 20) and continuing through Saturday in the Mandell Weiss Forum Theatre at La Jolla Playhouse, “Malashock/Raw 2” features new works by Malashock, Mizerany and guest choreographers Henry Torres and Angel Arabulata from Tijuana’s LUX BOREAL. Mizerany is the producer.

When asked what a producer does, Mizerany said, “He does everything. Nothing is too big; nothing is too incidental. I choreograph. I run rehearsals for LUX when LUX isn’t here. I run rehearsals for John’s piece. I process ticket orders, I sweep the floor. It’s always crunch time — not in a bad way; I really enjoy it.”

Asked if he was responsible for putting the raw in “Raw,” Mizerany said no — it was a collaborative effort. The company wanted to attract a younger age demographic (25 to 40) and decide more provocative and cutting edge than it was last year. Provocative? Certainly, Offensive? Perhaps. But it’s all in the eye of the beholder.

An innovation this year, “Live in the Splash Zone,” allows patrons who want to see sweat and effort to be seated onstage to experience “Malashock/Raw 2” from the dancers’ perspective.

“It’s killed us up close and personal and possibly dangerous,” According to Mizerany, those seats sold out almost immediately.

Malashock/Raw 2, Mandell Weiss Forum Theatre, La Jolla Playhouse, Oct. 20-22, 8 p.m., $20, $25 (day of show), (619) 260-1622, www.malashockdance.org
