OB EVENT DRAWS THOUSANDS

Thousands of visitors packed Ocean Beach on Oct. 12 and 13 for the 8th annual Oktoberfest celebration of all things Bavarian. Left, two competitors in the sausage toss check out the trajectory of their throw, while (above) a hungry competitor chows down during the popular bratwurst-eating contest. Besides the food and vendors lining Newport Avenue and Abbott Street, guests found plenty of musical entertainment to keep their toes tapping during the sun-drenched weekend. Bottom left, members of an oompah band give the crowd a traditional thrill while, below, another crowd enjoys the sounds of modern music.

‘Howl-O-Ween’ Canine Carnival something to bark about in OB

By STAFF AND CONTRIBUTION

No bones about it, the Kiwanis Club of Ocean Beach will inject the spirit of the spooky season into humans and several hundred of four-legged companions on Sunday, Oct. 28 when it hosts its seventh installment of the Ocean Beach “Howl-O-Ween” Canine Carnival at Dusty Rhodes Dog Park on the west side across from Robb Field.

The free event, held in association with the Ocean Beach Recreation Council with primary corporate sponsor Dog Beach Dog Wash, is an annual party for the dog-loving community, featuring games, a doggie costume parade, costume prizes, food and a street fair serving up goodies for pets and people.

Prize categories can be whimsical and could include entries for the scariest, funniest, cutest, ugliest, biggest, smallest, most OB-like, dog/owner look-alike — well, you get the picture. Separate judging categories will be for single dogs, groups of two or more dogs and floats entries (dogs riding on wagons, skateboards, other dogs).

Who said surfing is just for humans? These four-legged friends get ready for the canine parade with a float entry in a previous Ocean Beach ‘Howl-O-Ween’ Canine Carnival at Dusty Rhodes Dog Park.

The street fair and canine festival runs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., with the canine parade from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m. Dog registration is available from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and judges will cast their ballots at 2 p.m.

PLNU lands critical economic-forecast contract from state

By STAFF AND CONTRIBUTION

Point Loma Nazarene University’s Fermanian Business and Economic Institute (FBEI) has been awarded a year-long economic forecasting and consulting contract with the state of California. The forecasting contract positioned the FBEI as one of the leading economic voices in California beginning Oct. 1.

During the contract year, the FBEI will provide economic forecasting services to the California Controller’s Office, enabling the controller to fulfill his constitutional duties as the chief fiscal officer.

This contract is an affirmation of the reputation that PLNU has developed over the past few years,” said FBEI executive director Randy M. Ataide. “Our recent work in the field of business and economic consulting, forecasting and education addresses some of the most critical local, regional and national issues.”

Dr. Lynn Reaser, the FBEI’s chief economist, assumes the role of the chief economist of the Controller’s Council of Economic Advisors. She has served the council as a member since 2010 and has advised the controller on

Autistic Point Loma woman finds her ‘voice’ in revealing new book

It’s not easy to communicate with Peyton Goddard; she doesn’t “speak.” But if you “listen” carefully, you might be surprised by her thoughts and insights.

Burdened with the label of autism — and for decades a specter of “severe retardation,” as well — 37-year-old Goddard had no “voice” until 1997, when she learned to use a facilitated communication device to express her thoughts to her mother, Dianne. The two women have co-authored a book on Peyton Goddard’s struggles, frustrations and worldly insights.

PLHS Homecoming 2012: An all-class celebration

By SCOTT HOPKINS | The Beacon

The annual Homecoming football game is one of the greatest attractions for former Point Loma High School students. Pointer alumni came to Pete Ross Stadium by the thousands on Oct. 12 under temporary lighting to get their first look at the beautiful new Bennie Edens Field.

After the stadium seating was filled, the crowd spilled onto the field beyond the end zones, as alumni sought out friends from their days at the 87-year-old school.

Countless barbecued hamburgers and hot dogs were consumed and school logo items were purchased as alums enjoyed a rousing 34-7 Pointer victory over rival La Jolla High.

At halftime, the crowd reminisced as the high-energy entries by current students in the annual float parade and dance contest performed. Judges awarded the seniors first place, followed by the juniors, sophomores and freshmen.

The night illustrated the school’s motto: “Once a Pointer, Always a Pointer.”

Point Loma’s Pointers delighted an overflow Homecoming crowd at Petco Park Stadium with a 34-7 smackdown of rival La Jolla High on Oct. 12, returning the so-called “Shoe” trophy for another year.

With the victory, the Pointers sit atop the Western League standings with a league record of 2-0 (5-2 overall) and riding a four-game win streak.

“It really makes it fun when you can go out and entertain a big crowd,” head coach Mike Hastings said later, “and I think our kids did that. A 34-7 Homecoming win is pretty special.”

The stinging Pointer defense yielded only 118 total yards as the Dogs trotted the ground and another 49 yards (one touchdown) through the air.

Ironically, the contest was scoreless after one quarter, but the Dogs used twin turnovers to catch fire and score 21 points before the beginning of halftime after one quarter, but the Dogs went back to their winning ways in the second half.

First, running back Johnny Maes, after an 18-yard gain, lost the pigskin as he was tackled, the Vikings recovering the fumble.

Quarterback Brandon Martin (three completions in six attempts) capped the next Pointer drive with a 17-yard pass to Agnew five minutes later. A bad snap resulted in a missed PAT and a 1-0 Pointer lead.

Jeff Morin among local all-stars at songwriter showcase

By BART MENDOZA | THE BEACON

Java Joe’s has become well known, in part, for its role in bringing fresh new talent into the spotlight. But it is also known for shining a light on long-running artists who deserve far greater exposure than they’ve been accorded to date. Such is the case with local singer songwriter Jeffrey Joe Morin, who performs on Oct. 20 as part of a songwriter showcase that will also include appearances from Lisa Sanders, Rob Deo, Shawn Macintosh, Suannan Reed, Alson Marne, John Tafol- la and Bozena + Suede.

From among a crowd of local all-stars like this, Morin is a true standout. His music includes inspiration from Tio-Par Alley greats, wonderful chord flourishes and a touch of warm humor that’s infectious.

Morin first arrived in San Diego from Minnesota as a toddler in 1947. “I was a Navy brat,” he said. “We lived all around the world and the country for the 1950s and ’60s.”

He said his inspiration for playing music came in 1959. “It was at Kwajalein Village Navy Housing in Stockton,” he said. “They had a recreation room where sailors would gather on Saturdays to play Hank and Ernest and Lefty songs. I started learning them after buying a pawnshop guitar. Later, Mr. Eddie Gaspar from Pete’s band and Scotty’s [Cos] dad, Ray Cox, were huge influences in my learning the music of the American popular songs of the first half of the 20th century.”

Morin often performs with his ukulele, and he is an accomplished musician. “I want to play here in San Diego with my friends and fans and family. They call it ‘playing’ for good reason. If it begins to be...”

In her role as chief economist, she will conduct special sessions for the controller and his executive staff on critical economic topics, issues and trends. Prior to joining PLNU in 2009, Reaser served in a wide variety of industry roles over many years and is a past president and fellow of the National Association for Business Economics.

While the role of providing these services is multi-faceted, it is primarily centered on providing high-level independent macro-economic analysis to state Controller John Chiang.

Under the contract, this new role will supplement the far-reaching work of the FBEI, which has encompassed a number of the most important economic topics in the San Diego region, the state and the nation.

In addition to Reaser’s work for the state, Chiang will be a keynote speaker at FBEI’s annual Economic Outlook Forum to be held on Thursday, Nov. 15 at the Liberty Station Conference Center.
